

78 Million Can Do Anything They Want

No matter your political belief structure, what happens in the United States is up to you, not your public servants, elected, appointed or hired. In the United States, the buck always stops with the American citizens.

Over many years, I lost count of how many times someone said to me “can they really do that?” or “They can’t do that, it’s unconstitutional!” My answer has never changed...

Government can do anything it wants, if you let them. Our government has been in the business of doing illegal, unconstitutional, fraudulent, corrupt, criminal and even treasonous things for many...many years now. They have only been able to do it because American citizens long ago forgot, that they must remain forever vigilant in the never-ending protection and preservation of their own freedom, liberty, justice and prosperity.

In any true democratic republican form of self-governance, as guaranteed every citizen and every member state in the union, the key word is “self.”

For the record, Congress, with sole lawmaking power in the USA, is forbidden from ever adopting any laws which are themselves repugnant to the Constitution, or in violation of the Bill of Rights. Yet Congress has been doing exactly that for decades, unchecked.

Our Courts, which have no lawmaking power whatsoever, have been falsely referring to their own opinions as “law” (aka case law) for many years. But they have only been able to do that because American citizens have failed to be forever vigilant in protection of the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

For many years now, Presidents have performed like elected dictators, trying to run everything and everyone in the country via their “Executive Orders.” But those orders only legally pertain to Executive Branch employees and agencies, not the citizens or the independent states, unless such orders enjoy “federal supremacy” as an execution of laws constitutionally adopted by Congress, like our immigration laws.

Because no one is alive today who was alive when our federal government operated within Constitutional limits, most Americans assume that the government has powers it does not have constitutionally, just because that’s how it has been their entire lives.

But it isn’t just President Trump, his Cabinet, appointees, and employees, who are responsible for reigning the government back into constitutional compliance. In fact, alone, without you, they can’t even do it.

No, it’s the almost 78-million American voters who elected this team to clean house and restore our republic, who are in the end, responsible for what happens next in America.

Casting a ballot isn’t the finish line, it’s the starting line for the war ahead.

Protecting and preserving freedom for all posterity is not as easy as just showing up to vote once in a while. In fact, throughout human history, nothing on earth has ever come at a higher price than freedom itself.

The truth is...voting is the very least any American can do. If we are not going to remain directly engaged in our “self-governance” after the election, in-between elections, then government can and will do whatever it wants, no matter who we elect.

Unfortunately, most Americans believe that their vote is the limit of their power. “What else can we do?” ...is a common question I have heard for many years. A lot is the answer! In fact, anything you want, if you just do it together! Defending freedom requires so much more than just your occasional vote. It isn't any fun, but it is absolutely necessary!

For most of our lives, we're so focused on working, earning, raising a family, paying bills, and living life, that it seems there is little time to focus time, energy, and resources on politics, the only peaceful means of defending freedom. Most of us don't like politics and would rather never have to even think about it, much less engage in it.

Yet, if we are not directly engaged in the running of our country, our state, county, city and community, then someone else is. In almost every case, we are not going to like how other people run our lives, and trust me when I tell you, politics has grown to a point where everything is political now, and it influences our lives more than ever.

Did you drive our country to $37-trillion in debt, or did you let the “experts” do that for you? Did you destroy our constitutional courts, replaced with English Common Law courts long ago, or did you let the “legal experts” do that for you? Did you cause record inflation, or did you allow the “expert economists” to do that?

See what I mean? While we like to blame politicians for acting like politicians always act, it's you and me who allow it to happen, and allow it to continue.

We know what to do and who to call when we have a leak in the house, if the fridge stops working, or the HVAC takes a dump in the middle of winter. But what do we do and who do we call when our government is broken?

Well, the “education experts” have failed to teach proper constitutional civics for decades, too. So, it shouldn’t surprise anyone that most Americans don’t know what to do as their government intrudes deeper and deeper into their private lives, while bankrupting the government and nation they were hired to run.

But it’s not as complicated as you might think. It works exactly the same. Every government employee is an employee of the American taxpayers. They are not employed by politicians, judges, illegal aliens, foreign interests or global corporations. They all work for you, all of them, top to bottom...From the President all the way down to the college intern, every agency employee, every Judge, every legislator.

Why talk about J6? Every federal property is the property of American taxpayers. No one has more right to enter those sites than the taxpayers do.

But have WE been doing our job?

There’s no such thing as “constitutional rights” of the people. The Constitution only defines the rights and powers of government, not you. The Bill of Rights is not an enumeration of your rights. It’s a list of prohibitions, things the government has no right to do at all, ever.

If we want our government to represent the American taxpayers again, within the limited authorities of government, including the separation of powers, then the taxpayers will have to make it so.

“I’m just one person, what can I do?” ... Again, no matter who you are, alone, you can’t do anything but vote. This begs the question, why are you trying to work alone?

78-million Trump voters can do anything they want, especially while Trump sits in our White House. So, while we have this opportunity, take full advantage of it. Engage in the process of saving the Constitutional Republic. Make it a personal goal and objective to make your voice heard every day if necessary.

The government wants to tell you what to do and their lamestream media wants to tell you what to think about it. Neither cares about what you think, unless you make them care!

Talk to your local, city, county and state officials. Talk to your legislators in D.C., the Judges in your districts, and even President Trump.

Or...they don't work for you!

You decide!
