

A New Year And A New Age

On January 20th, 2017 Donald J. Trump was formally sworn in as the 45th President of the United States of America. Despite certain public polls that indicate the president remains a very unpopular figure among most Americans especially females, our republic will rise again even though many Americans are ignorant of the truth. In fact, I will call it a new American great awakening. Of course, millennials will have to learn that the socialism they now prefer is not the road to real economic prosperity or justice as they like to call it.

The decades of poisoning American students against everything you can think of as good brought America alarmingly close to utter collapse during the election of 2017. Had Mrs. Clinton been elected president, I submit to you that "We the People" would have to be concerned about everything ranging from major military invasions to the complete collapse of our America equal to what occurred in Venezuela. Believe it or not, the honest reason why the dragon media has been on a seemingly endless attack on Trump is not because of his tweets or certain behavioral proclivities, though that is what they promote to an incurably ignorant mass of sovereign citizens.

The real problem with president Trump, is his attack against long standing institutions and customs that have been in place to bring about the gradual decline and wasting away of the United States of America. Our republic is the one and only nation that stands in the way of the underhanded mission of the United Nations, other leftist organizations and cabals to plunge the world into a false sense of security then sudden collapse. Venezuela is exhibit A for such a plot. Trump understands that for a nation to remain great, her people must be economically prosperous, appreciative of the nation, have stable traditional families, faith in God and maintain high moral values. That does not appeal to those who envision fundamentally changing America.

But fortunately, there is a growing remnant of Americans who love God, country and family. We understand that if our republic is to be that shining city on a hill nation again, we must be willing to refocus America on the very principles that made her great. It is not so much a revival that is needed, but rather an awakening. For the first time in our nation's history, over half of a generation is void of Christian values, knowledge and respect for our constitution and bill of rights or why it is important to protect our national sovereignty. On the surface, one might say the situation looks hopeless and that America the beautiful is doomed to land on the ash heap of history.

But if one actually takes a look at history, there are numerous examples of various civilizations overcoming tremendous odds and avoiding the ultimate destruction of their society. Our own republic was threatened with the possibility of being wiped out before the inauguration of our first president. Then again in 1812 the British burned the presidential residence to the ground and attempted to grab the port of New Orleans, but our resolve to overcome was underestimated a second time. When one considers that Great Britain was the super power of that time and rarely if ever lost military conflicts it was miraculous that the United States defeated the British Empire twice.

Perhaps we today can take a page from history and close ranks with those who are not willing to allow our republic to be driven into oblivion. I recommend that we reaffirm our faith in and relationship with the one who first shed his grace upon America long ago and seek his Providential guidance. It was good enough for George Washington, George Patton, George W. Bush and recently, president Trump who called on Americans to pray to God for His Providential guidance and forgiveness for our individual and societal shortcomings.

As we embark upon a new year, we will also encounter a new era of American resurgence and leadership. I believe you will soon witness massive exposures in government and the taking down of the deep state, who's swamp dwellers, like the British of old thought they were invincible. If were not for the years of praying and seeking forgiveness for allowing America to fall so low that she would choose a snake like Obama for president, this nation would now be on the road to nowhere fast. But wise American believers from all walks of life took the Biblical verse 2nd Chronicles 7:14 to heart. It reads. If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven and I will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

Dear reader, fasten your seatbelts because it is going to be a bumpy ride on the road to America's recovery, but fear not because the swamp will be drained, and our republic will truly be the land of the free and home of the brave.
