Running against Moody In The Primary

Twin Trouble

Alexander Vindman testified against Donald Trump in his 2019 impeachment trial. Vindman's statements were questioned and insider sources asked that he back away. And, he did, until now.

On that call in 2019, President Donald Trump asked Ukraine President Volodymyr Zelensky to "look into" former Vice President Joe Biden and his son Hunter, according to a White House memorandum of the July phone conversation.

Here, from the CNBC article on that call, with transcripts:

"There's a lot of talk about Biden's son," said Trump, "that Biden stopped the prosecution and a lot of people want to find out about that, so whatever you can do with the attorney general would be great," Trump said in the July 25 call, according to the memo. "Biden went around bragging that he stopped the prosecution, so if you can look into it, It sounds horrible to me."

Initially, Zelensky asserted that he felt no pressure during the call. However, as the situation evolved, especially amidst U.S. political dynamics, (pressure from the Left?) he acknowledged the complexities involved in Ukraine's relationship with the U.S. and how it was affected by the perceptions of the call.

Vindman, born in Ukraine and having served more than two decades in the U.S. military, happened to be serving on the National Security Council, (NSC) in 2019 when, as an official with Ukrainian contacts, he was one of two who sat in on Trump's phone all

During the call, the subject of the first impeachment, Vindman stated that Trump pressured Zelensky to investigate the family of Joe Biden, then running for president. It was felt that Trump's approach could undermine U.S. interests and had implications for foreign relations, especially regarding Ukraine. Little did they know how effective 'Trump's approach' could be for bringing peace to a needy world.

Alexander and his twin brother, Eugene, a lawyer on the National Security Council, reported their concerns and sparked investigations.

If you recall, what Trump was doing was trying to look into the fact that the Joe Biden, as vice president of the United States, withheld a loan guarantee and took a bribe to pressure Ukraine into firing prosecutor general Viktor Shokin to prevent a corruption investigation of the Ukrainian gas company, Burisma, and to protect his son Hunter Biden, who was on the Burisma board.

In essence, Trump could smell it, and everyone else denied the stench.

During his time on Burisma's Board, 2014 – 2019, Hunter was regarded as a "helpful, non-executive director", according to Yahoo news, and countless others. lol. What a title for all that pay...$1 million per year for 5 years.

When Papa Joe left the White House in 2024, he pardoned Hunter completely, for everything back, to 2014, the year Hunter joined the Burisma board. What a coincidence, as they say..

That pardon answers any question that might remain.

One of the Biden insiders, Tony Bobulinski, a business partner of Hunter's, finally spoke up in October, 2020, and revealed several facts, although nearly every media source still stands up for the Bidens. No surprise there.

Bobulinski stated that he was involved in business ventures with Hunter Biden and an energy company called CEFC China Energy. He claimed these dealings included discussions about significant investments and joint ventures.

Bobulinski also said that Joe Biden was aware of his son's business activities and even claimed that he was referred to as "the big guy" in communications, suggesting that he would receive a share of the profits.

Vindman apparently remembers none of this. Hey Florida, you recognize his kind. Vindman's just after Trump – kind of like DeSantis, and his boy, Evan Power.

Mr. Vindman was fired from the NSC by the Senate, in 2022 – the same body he now wishes to join. (Isn't that some kind of a first?) He then went on to serve as an adviser for VoteVets, which works to elect veterans to public office. Wonder how many he drove away?

He also became a doctoral student and a Foreign Policy Institute fellow at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies.

Vindman lives in Broward County. Today, he announced his intention to run, “to get Donald Trump, and bring socialism to Florida, and for Floridians, a “bailout”.

He is running in the primary against Ashley Moody, whom DeSantis appointed in the special election to replace Marco Rubio.

Eugene Vindman, his twin brother, now serves as a congressman from Virginia. The rot spreads.
