

Allegory Of France's Destruction And The West's

"As seen from the outside, massive upheaval of Western society is approaching the limit beyond which it will become "meta-stable" and must collapse." – Solzhenitsyn

In the past four weeks, you witnessed thousands of French people rioting and stoning the police in the streets of Paris. While you heard from the main stream media that the entire ruckus revolves around gas taxes, the riptide undercurrent stems from mass immigration from Africa and the Middle East.

The French elite never experience the consequences of third world immigration, but the average French citizen must deal with rapes, schools collapsing, theft, trash on their streets, killings, Islamic jihad such as Paris and Nice, degraded neighborhoods, cultural displacement, and everyday fear of walking down the streets with the very real possibility of being raped or run over by an immigrant.

The French face being eaten alive and their culture degraded much like the 1974 novel Camp of the Saints by Jean Raspail. Some call it a brilliant novel on Europe's descendance into cultural hell. Others call it 'racist' because the author attempted to warn the French people that endless immigration guaranteed the demise and displacement of the French out of their own country.

“You don’t know my people. If this band of brutes ever lands on your shores, they will swallow you up.” – Jean Raspail

Writer Paul Craig Roberts wrote, “The Russians and Chinese do not need to do anything about Europe and the United States. The West is self-destructing at a rapid pace. French generals accuse Macron of treason over the United Nations Migration Pact.”

The pact, signed by 164 nations on Monday, including France, does not legally bind but greases the skids for unlimited migration to be treated as a human right and criticism of mass migration to be treated as hate speech.

Craig wrote, “The letter accuses Macron of being “guilty of a denial of democracy or treason against the nation” for signing the pact without putting it to the people. The French state is late in coming to realize the impossibility of integrating too many people, in addition to totally different cultures, who have regrouped in the last forty years in areas that no longer submit to the laws of the Republic. Immigration is erasing France’s “civilizational landmarks”.

According to British MEP Janice Atkinson, the United Nations pact leads Europe into another 59 million new migrants within the next six years.

Knock, knock, knock fellow Americans! Your own Congress expects to import 100 million legal immigrants within 30 years. Anybody see a problem with that figure?

Atkinson said, “European countries are having their culture and identity crushed. It will be illegal not to use their prescribed language. And goodbye to your democracy and your way of life if the pact is implemented.”

Please note that allowing mass migration into first world countries guarantees the West a dismal if not conflict-ridden future. Further, the United States and Canada solve nothing with the understanding that Africa, at 1.1 billion people in 2018, faces demographic projections of 2.0 billion by 2050 and 4.0 billion by 2095.

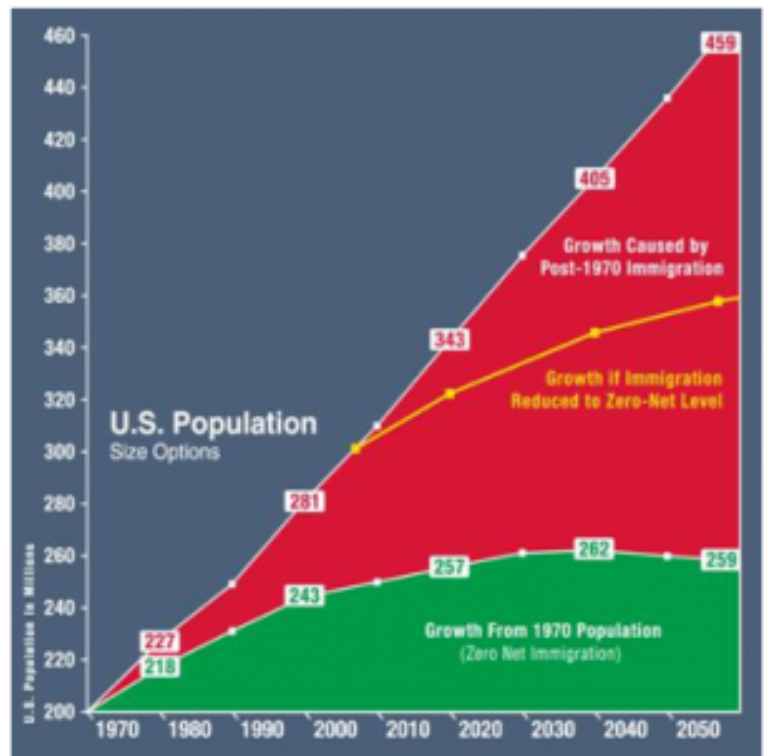

In all, the French people fight for their lives. At the same time, Great Britain, Germany, Spain, Holland, Belgium, Finland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Austria and Italy gasp their last breaths if they fail to stop all immigration from a line that never ends.

What I would like to understand: why are the leaders of the European Union bent on destroying European culture, education and stable societies?

Who, in their right mind, thinks that bushmen and women from Africa, used to living in huts, and hunter gatherers, and who lack any Western educational foundation, can do anything but live on welfare in first world countries?

While we watch the French attempt to save their country from the migration invasion, we, too, the American people, along with Canadians stand in the cross-hairs of a demographic Godzilla that will strangle our ability to exist.

The French people stand in riot lines in coming to grips with the impossibility of integrating too many people, especially from totally incompatible cultures, and, who created religious enclaves that possess no semblance of wanting to integrate or become French or submit to the laws of the French Republic.

Well, fellow Americans, look no further than Detroit, Michigan or Minneapolis, Minnesota or Fremont, California or Miami, Florida or Los Angeles, California. Our own immigrants create parallel societies in our own country that possess nothing in common with America or American ways of life.

This video sums it up as to what's coming to America if we fail to stop all immigration into the United States.

"In multiracial societies, you don't vote in accordance with your economic interests, you vote in accordance with race and religion." – Lee Kuan Yew (Founder Of Singapore)

"Immigration is a form of war in which the violence is delayed." – Martin Van Creveld

"Tolerance and apathy are the last virtues of a dying society." – Aristotle
