

America's Top Ten Biased LGBT Mainstream News And Entertainment Reporters

Many LGBTs who work in the mainstream media claim to be objective reporters, but due to their sexual orientation they cannot help but be biased. And, unlike what they would say, people who are gay are living a perverted lifestyle. Their agenda, whether openly stated or privately held, is to continue to move America away from a traditional monogamous marriage nation and transform it into one liberated from such restraints.

As the media loves to report on the sex lives of politicians, using real, unconfirmed, and conjured up stories, this article will report on the confirmed sex lives and orientations of America's top ten most recognized LGBT news and entertainment reporters.

ROBIN ROBERTS

Robin Roberts is the anchor newswoman of ABC's "Good Morning America." Roberts first publicly acknowledged her lesbianism when she began dating Amber Laign, a massage therapist, in 2005. Many Americans start their mornings with news commentary coming from lesbian Robin Roberts.

ANDERSON COOPER

Anderson Cooper is a host of CNN, "Anderson Cooper 360," and "Anderson Live." Cooper officially announced that he was gay in 2012, but up until then, many presumed that he was. Some would say that the title of one of Anderson's shows, "Anderson Cooper 360," suggests that some time ago, Anderson made a 360-degree turn in his sex life.

Mr. Anderson is no Neo, nor is he the only 'one' using his media position to promote the anti-heterosexual, anti-traditional family agenda, and the Democrat Party in general.

During the 2016 presidential campaign, acting as a Democrat operative, Cooper admonished then Republican nominee Donald Trump for a recording in which Trump said that he kissed women without consent and groped women by their genitals. Cooper then went on to accuse Trump of sexual assault. Trump said that he was embarrassed by his words on the tape and described them as "locker room talk."

Cooper's hypocrisy was shown afterward when a video surfaced of him stealing a kiss from pop star Madonna, without first asking for her consent, and then bragging that he just kissed Madonna. Additionally, every anal intercourse sex act Cooper does with his boyfriend(s) is a case of sexual assault via an act of sodomy.

DON LEMON

Don Lemon, CNN host. Lemon officially announced that he was gay in 2011. There hasn't been a day gone by in which Lemon-head hasn't bashed Donald Trump or has promoted the narrative that America is a racist, homophobic country. Lemon is not as well known for his reporting as he is for being the FAKE NEWS poster boy.

President Trump has signed out CNN and Don Lemon, calling them FAKE NEWS, a label which has stuck. Lemon has cut off speakers and has walked off the CNN studio on a few occasions when invited guests have accused him of creating fake news stories.

RACHEL MADDOW

Rachel Maddow of MSNBC's "The Rachel Maddow Show." The Mad Cow is up front, open, and proud of being a lesbian. She has the look of a dorky female Fonzie with her man-cut hairstyle and oversized eyeglasses. She often discusses LGBT topics on her show, while promoting a far left sociopolitical agenda.

Maddow infamously made a fool of herself when she announced that she had a smoking gun, Donald Trump's tax returns, and then went on to reveal that she had a partial copy of his old 2005 tax returns, in which Trump made $150 million and paid $38 million in taxes. Trump's son Donald Jr. tweeted, thanking Maddow for showing the world that Trump is a successful businessman who pays his taxes.

STEVE KORNACKI

Steve Kornacki is a co-host of MSNBC's "The Cycle," political journalist, and writer. Kornacki announced he was gay in 2011 in a column at Salon.com.

JANE VELEZ-MITCHELL

Jane Velez-Mitchell of HLN. Velez-Mitchell, host of "Issues With Jane Velez-Mitchell," and former host of the now cancelled "Jane Velez-Mitchell Show," came out as a lesbian in 2007. Velez-Mitchell often appears on Nancy Grace's "Headline News" and does commentary for CNN and E!

THOMAS ROBERTS

Thomas Roberts is a news anchor for MSNBC. Roberts anchored "Live with Thomas Roberts," until the show cancelled in 2016, but not before winning an Emmy Award for its coverage of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision on legalizing gay marriage. Roberts also hosted "Out There with Thomas Roberts," a weekly show dedicated to promoting LGBT equality. Yes, Roberts is certainly 'out there.'

SUSAN ORMAN

Susan 'Suze' Orman is the host of CNBC's "The Suze Orman Show," and is an author, financial advisor, and motivational speaker. With a reported $35 million net worth as of 2018, no one can argue that being a lesbian hampers anyone from becoming rich. Orman has made a career out of giving financial advice, yet she is a supporter of the Democrat Party and their disastrous economic policies. She supported President Obama and donated to and supported Hillary Clinton in her failed presidential bid.

PEREZ HILTON

Perez Hilton is a blogger for PerezHilton.com, a columnist, and television personality. Hilton is perhaps the most well known openly gay person in America. At age 39, his net worth was estimated to be $30 million, which goes to show the widespread acceptance of homosexuality in America, despite gays' claims that they are stigmatized and persecuted on American soil.

RUPAUL

RuPaul Andres Charles is an American drag queen, actor, author, model, singer, songwriter, and television personality. RuPaul is considered to be the most commercially successful drag queen in history. In 2017, RuPaul was named in the "Time 100" list as one of the most influential people of the world.

Another notable mention is Bruce 'Caitlyn' Jenner, a mentally ill, mutilated man masquerading as a woman, a person whose behavior the mainstream media encourages, enables, and applauds, as they tell the American public that Bruce is Caitlyn, a woman.

This is just a small sample of the well-known faces that Americans receive their news, information, and entertainment from on a daily basis. There are many other LGBTs who work in the newsrooms as managing editors, writers, and support staff.

The days of America being a mom and dad, baseball and apple pie country are long gone. Many Americans seem surprised that many in the mainstream news media are extremely biased in the way in which they report the news. Americans were lectured for decades not to be homophobic, that sexual orientation should not disqualify anyone from any position, and that gays can report on the news honestly and without personal bias. That has been proven to not be true at all. There can be no doubt that if an open, traditional family advocating, pro-life Christian applied for a news position at many of America's 'news' agencies, such held beliefs would be grounds for disqualification.

As was evident in the recent presidential cycle, it really did not matter how many times Obama has failed the American people with disastrous economic, domestic, and foreign policies, high unemployment, soaring deficits, record food stamp enrollments; he was always able to count upon his friendly media to praise him as a great president. Likewise, under President Trump the stock market has soared, there is record low unemployment – even among the African-American population, illegal immigration is down, and the runaway federal deficit has slowed dramatically, as sound fiscal policies have replaced reckless ones. Yet the media is acting like our widely successful president is mentally unstable and is not physically fit for office. Why?

Results do not matter to well-paid LGBT news reporter advocates. They care first and foremost about two issues: abortion on demand and complete sexual liberation and deviancy, which includes the breakdown of the traditional family unit. The abortionist destroys the seed of human life and the homosexual perverts it. Homosexuals cannot reproduce, so they must recruit. What better way is there for them to recruit than to have a government that promotes and supports their lifestyle at the expense of the traditional family unit? Homosexuals must turn straight people away from heterosexuality to homosexuality for legitimacy and more sex choice options to benefit their lifestyle.

Most every story the media reports on is crafted negatively or positively, depending on who they are reporting on, by agenda driven reporters and the news agencies that they work for.

It has become all too apparent that when the sexual deviants run the newsroom, it is like the inmates running the asylum. Americans should expect to continue to receive fake news and not 'straight' news out of the mainstream news organizations and entertainment industry, which are run by LGBTs, now and in the foreseeable future. Wise Americans already know not to trust the fake news being churned out from many of the aforementioned mainstream news agencies, entertainment sources, and their reporters, and seek their news from other, more reliable sources.
