

Ballad of Charlie Kirk

Song Written by Amil Imani

(Verse 1)

Oh, Charlie Kirk, a lion's heart so fierce,
Born to slay where shadows' lies would pierce.
At thirty-one, you forged a blazing flame,
Turning Point, your thunder, your great name.
With truth as steel, you stormed the traitor's den,
Rallied the youth to make this sacred land rise again.
No fear, no chains, you faced the storm's cruel bite,
A patriot's soul, you burned for freedom's fight.

(Chorus)

Oh, Charlie, warrior, your spirit storms the sky,
Through blood and tears, your truth will never die.
They stole your breath, but not your battle cry,
Charlie Kirk, eternal in the sky.

(Verse 2)

September tenth, the day the angels screamed,
In Utah's halls, where freedom's fire gleamed.
Your words like lightning cracked the traitor's lore,
Till a sniper's venom, from shadows cold and vile,
Slashed your lion's roar, yet your fire burns a mile.
Your wife and babes beheld their hero's stand,
Your courage calls, a beacon across the land.
From campus wars to Trump's unyielding might,

You carved the path to hurl us back to light.

(Chorus)

Oh, Charlie, warrior, your spirit storms the sky,
Through blood and tears, your truth will never die.
They stole your breath, but not your battle cry,
Charlie Kirk, eternal in the sky.

(Bridge)

They thought they'd crush us, choke our freedom's song,
But your spark ignites us, millions charge along.
Seth's stolen breath, Scalia's shrouded flame,
Haney's silenced truth, their blood a righteous claim.
Charlie's crimson fall, the spark to end their reign,
The deep state quakes, their terror drowns in pain.
No coward's bullet can cage a soul so free,
Charlie, you're the blaze of victory.

(Verse 3)

In twenty-five, we crush their traitor's spell,
With Trump's iron hand, the invaders were sent to hell.
Ten million gone, the border's iron gate,
The swamp in flames, we seal the tyrants' fate.
Your dream's alive, your fight's our sacred vow.
Every student's roar, each flag that breaks the night,
Carries Charlie's heart, the tide that wins the fight.
You're not lost, brother, your spirit leads the way,
Guiding us to dawn, to America's new day.

(Chorus)

Oh, Charlie, warrior, your spirit storms the sky,
Through blood and tears, your truth will never die.
They stole your breath, but not your battle cry,
Charlie Kirk, eternal in the sky.

(Outro)

So raise the flag, let thunder split the dawn,
Charlie's name in every heart lives on.
Sing his name, let the tyrants' towers fall!
Through darkest night, your light will lead us all.
A patriot's soul, unyielding, iron-strong,
Oh, Charlie Kirk, our brother, guide, and song.
We'll fight, we'll win, your banner raised on high,
Charlie Kirk, arise! Arise! Arise!

Forever in the sky...

Forever in the sky.
Forever... ever... sky.
