

Beto O'Rourke: The Selling Of Socialism By The Fawning Media

By NWV Senior Political News Writer, Jim Kouri

Many Democrats already believe that Texas Democrat “Beto” O’Rourke is the man who can beat President Trump in 2020, however, one of television’s favorite physicians Dr. Drew Pinsky is concerned that “something’s not right” with the former congressman. And the good doctor didn’t even mention Beto’s arrests for drunk driving or burglary. (See Police Report at bottom of story). All of this is sure to deny Pinsky appearances on CNN, MSNBC, Good Morning America, the Today Show and the rest of the major news media outlets.

“I thought that [O’Rourke] was Tony Robbins (a huckster known for his infomercials, seminars, and self-help books including Unlimited Power and Awaken the Giant Within),” Pinsky, a board-certified internist and addiction medicine specialist, said on the “Brian Kilmeade Show” in response to audio of O’Rourke’s presidential announcement video.

“I’m just saying, there’s something gonna go down there. I can feel it coming. I don’t know what it is... There’s something not right,” Pinsky said.

Beto O’Rourke is a Texas Democrat who’s running for President of the United States against a plethora of Democratic candidates in the November 2020 election against GOP incumbent

Donald Trump. On Thursday, Beto O'Rourke finally announced what most political pundits already believed: He's running for President against an army of Democratic competitors. And while Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez – dubbed AOC by the fawning news media – appears to be carrying the Socialist Flag, Beto is thought to be better at contorting the English language.

Almost immediately, the national press began gushing over Beto. For example, MSNBC's Chris Matthews who was famously mocked for his overt elation for then-candidate Barack Obama during the 2008 presidential election, where he said he felt a "thrill" up his leg for the Democrat. It appears O'Rourke is the new Obama, at least for Matthews.

"It should be noted that this was the same lefty host who hosted a pep rally disguised as a town hall for Robert Francis O'Rourke on October 30, 2018, and was nearly unanimous in terms of softballs compared to actual questions," NewsBusters managing editor Curtis Houck wrote.

The El Paso, Texas Democrat was a political flop far before he entered the national stage. He's frequently been caught lying, cheating, and misleading his constituents to the point where even his fellow Democrats hate him in his own city, according to Red State political reporter Brandon Morse.

According to a law enforcement colleague, Professor Jean Reynolds, in 1998 at 26-years old O'Rourke was arrested for driving while intoxicated (DUI) and attempting to flee the scene of an accident. That accident had become an issue in the senatorial campaign that he lost to Texas Republican Ted Cruz despite the financial backing of radical multi-billionaire George Soros and MoveOn.org. Prof. Reynold's teaching experience includes a police academy and a prison school.

DEFENDANT(S):	OFFENSE(S):	COUNTY: DISTRICT:
Donnerke, Robert Francis	Driving While Intoxicated	El Paso 09/27/98 03:30
On September 27, 1998, I was dispatched to I-10 East Mile Marker 2, reference to a motor vehicle accident. I met with the reporter and driver of the American Medical Ambulance. The reporter said that while he and his partner were traveling east bound on I-10 they observed a green in color Volvo pass them at a high rate of speed. The vehicle then lost control moments later and struck a truck traveling the same direction. After the driver/defendant struck the truck he sent the defendant's vehicle across the center median and to a complete stop facing east bound. The defendant/driver then attempted to leave the scene, the reporter then turned on his over head lights to warn oncoming traffic and to try to get the defendant to stop. When I made contact with the driver I asked him if he was hurt and that if he needs medical attention. Defendant was unable to be understood due to slurred speech. Defendant also had glassy eyes and breath smelled of an alcohol beverage. I then asked the driver/defendant to step out of the vehicle, upon doing so the defendant almost fell to the floor. I asked the defendant if he had consumed any alcohol beverages that morning and he answered yes. I then decided to conduct the one leg stand and the walk and turn tests. I fully instructed the driver/defendant on how to complete both tests. The defendant/driver could not seem to do a paced manner on the walk and turn and on the one leg stand the subject attempted several times and failed by losing his balance. At this time I placed the defendant behind my patrol unit. SGT. Bargino arrived in the area at this time and advised me that he would handle the motor vehicle accident. I transported the defendant to the El Paso Police West Side Sub Station where he was read the Police Officer statutory warning and agreed to take the breath test. Defendant blew a .130 and a .134, he was later transported to Judge Kosterakis for Magistrate Warnings and Bond Setting and later booked into the County Jail.

"I met with the reporter who said he was traveling west bound on I-10 and observed a black in color Volvo traveling the same direction at a high rate of speed. The driver then lost control of the vehicle and struck a truck traveling the same direction sending the defendant's vehicle across the center median and pointing eastbound. The driver attempted to leave the accident but was stopped by the reporter. It was then determined after a brief interview that the defendant/driver was intoxicated. The defendant was then transported to the El Paso Police West side Sub Station where he was given the Breath Test. Subject failed."

The reporter told me the following:

- the driver lost control of the vehicle
- it struck a truck traveling the same direction
- it crossed the center median and pointed eastbound
- the driver tried to leave the accident
- the reporter stopped him
