

Blessings

December 29, 2024

The Holidays are passed. We have thanked our Lord, dined and laughed or cried with family and friends. Another season of grateful celebration has come and gone. We have had much for which to be thankful this year.

The story of our Savior is remembered yet again; His strength, His power, His love and forgiveness for us all. This year, somehow, it all felt a little different. More real perhaps? Seldom have we seen, at least in our lifetimes, the direct hand of God working among us. We saw that this year, I do believe.

We have also seen Lucifer and his followers on blatant display.

We've seen and learned a lot this year. Some, has stunned us, by showing us a reality we had hitherto only speculated about. Our President – the duly elected one from 2020, was the target of mad assassins not once but twice. They were of our unelected government, almost assuredly. Donald John Trump stood up bleeding and curled a fist in the air, mouthing, "Fight". Then, he kept on keepin' on.

God 2, Lucifer 0 on those two fields of sport, Butler and West Palm Beach. Let's run up that score in 2025!

Donald Trump has gone on to inspire us all, in the moments and months after the attempts on his life. There is zero doubt that the Lord, whose birth we celebrate this day, was watching over the life of a man who is sorely needed by a world that is in shreds.

Just as we remember our God, our Savior in our own religious traditions, we head into a new year, anno domini 2025 with a fresh reminder that the power of God, combined with the strength of man, will create a better world. I am not trying to deify Trump in any way, believe me!

I just think that, looking back over this crazy incredible year, perhaps the Lord has shown us that He wants our help, too, to turn our ship of state away from the rocks of evil, so that our course may be corrected, everywhere, with peace and a plan, instead of violence and bloodshed. So many of you have helped already. I am constantly in awe of your efforts, everywhere in every field. Thank you. Thank you all.

Blessings to us all in the work ahead,
