

Conspiracies and Conspiracy Theories

What is a conspiracy? A conspiracy is a legal term designating an association of two or more people who secretly carry out an illegal or criminal activity. Granted, not all secret activities can be termed conspiracies. A group of people planning in secret a surprise party for a friend's birthday cannot be termed a conspiracy. The essential part of this definition is that the group meets in secret to violate the law or commit a crime.

On the other hand we have a term has suddenly catapulted into the headlines of the news: conspiracy theory. Conspiracy theories are advanced by conspiracy theorists. There are several definitions of what a conspiracy theorist is, but I am going to offer mine.

To me, a conspiracy theorist is a derogatory term created for the sole purpose of discrediting a person who offers a logical explanation of an event or process that essentially differs from the explanation provided by the government. Actually, most so-called conspiracy theories are created to counteract the farfetched conspiracy theories advanced by the U.S. government.

The globalist conspirators who control the U.S. government are the main source of false theories that, being the product of a few people who conspired in secret to create and divulge them, easily fall into the category of conspiracy theories. The most recent is the one which claims that sexual pervert Jeffrey Epstein committed suicide in his jail cell.

A typical example is the coordinated campaign to discredit and censor Alex Jones because he consistently offered a different version of the explanation of the 9/11 events provided by the U.S. Government. The campaign has been so nasty and pervasive that in some mainstream media Alex Jones has become a synonym for kook.

But a serious organization of architects and engineers[1] basically believe that Jones is right and that the explanation offered by the U.S. government simply cannot be true. Moreover, just recently, several NY area Fire Commissioners have asked for a 9/11 investigation due to the “overwhelming evidence” that “pre-planted explosives . . . caused the destruction of the three World Trade Center buildings.”[2]

The explanation offered by President George W. Bush just a day after 9/11 was that a few Muslims conspired to carry out the 9/11 events. But it is a theory, because the explanation was offered without carrying out an investigation to find what really happened. As of today, no investigation of the 9/11 events has been carried out. Actually, the different government agencies joined President Bush not only in avoiding an investigation but also to obstruct it. Videos taken just after the events show government agents in Manhattan and the Pentagon tampering with the evidence.

Now, why did key members of the U.S. government order, or at least authorize, some agents of authority to destroy the evidence? The most logical explanation is because they didn't want the American people to know what really happened that tragic day which will live in infamy. As if on cue, the CFR-controlled media began calling anybody who advanced an explanation that differed from Bush's farfetched conspiracy theory a “conspiracy theorist”. Curiously, the alleged liberal, “progressive,” anti-Bush Left, has never criticized him for his conspiracy theory about the 9/11 events.

Moreover, after such a failure of our alphabet soup of agencies whose agents' main job is to protect us from such attacks, nobody was reprimanded, much less fired.[3] An interesting detail is that the alleged liberal, progressive, anti-Bush Left, nor the leftist mainstream media, has ever criticized him for his farfetched conspiracy theory about what really happened on September 11th, 2001.

Conspiracy theories do not come out of the blue. Most of them are triggered by government's explanations of an event that are deliberately false. Just a few minutes after the government declared that sexual predator Jeffrey Epstein had committed suicide by hanging himself in his jail cell, dozen of conspiracy theories erupted like mushrooms after a summer shower.

Granted, 9/11 is not the first time the U.S. government has used dramatic events in order to have the pretext to carry out a previously-conceived plan. The examples abound: the explosion of the USS Maine battleship in Havana's bay used as a pretext to start a predatory war with Spain; the sinking of the Lusitania, as a pretext to get the U.S. involved in WWI; the attack on Pearl Harbor, used a pretext to involve the U.S. into WWII; the Gulf of Tonkin incident, used as a pretext to escalate the war in Vietnam.

Current conspiracy theories advanced by the globalist conspirators are global warming, peak oil, carbon dioxide as a poisonous gas and shrinking ice in polar caps, just to mention a few.

But none of these nefarious events has affected Americans as much as 9/11. The 9/11 events were the pretext used to start the so-called "war on terror," that justified the creation of the Office of Homeland Security, the Transportation Security Administration, the militarization of the police, the creation of a national police[5], and the current total surveillance society which closely follows the lines of Nazi Germany, the Soviet Union and the current in China and Cuba.

These organizations have changed the American Republic into a sort of totalitarian nightmare very similar to the ones described by Aldous Huxley in Brave New World and George Orwell in 1984. Since 9/11 Americans are living in a permanent state of fear, a fear fueled by their own government. Under the guise of protecting us from terrorists, the U.S. government has turned a former proud and brave people into a nation of sheep.

But wait! This is just the beginning. The next step, which is now in process, is to finally deprive the sheep of any tool they can use to defend themselves. The materialization of Obama's dream[4] is the militarized police we now see proudly exhibiting their war weapons they will use to keep the rest of us in line – or else!
