

Defining WW III

By Ms. Smallback

February 10, 2024

When you're raised on the controllers of the narrative's history, you view things like war kind of black and white. There are bad guys and there are good guys, and they fight each other with guns and tanks, submarines and planes. People die from direct and indirect fire. Espionage and spying happens in backrooms and shadowy streets, and the side with the best strategy, best fighters, and scariest weapons usually wins. There's a mental imagery for this, and the media blasts it in movies and books and magazines. We envision things like mushroom clouds, mangled bloody bodies, low flying airplanes, dirty orphaned toddlers, etc.

So it's hard to tell people WWIII is not in the future, it is now. Modern warfare has less to do with battle lines and territorial conflicts and more to do with controlling the flow of money and redrawing the power lines of people control. Modern warfare is less about moving boundaries between nations and more about making nations boundary-less. They don't care about things like "borders" anymore. World dominion is the goal, not national upheaval. They're not declaring war to achieve this, they're actually committing acts of war to do it.

Modern warfare isn't rolling tanks down the streets; it uses technology to roll ideology into the masses. They aren't bombing the cities and military posts as much as they are controlling the information and infiltrating the mind. They don't use war rations, they use things like "inflation" and "shortages". There hasn't been an official declaration of war, and yet today's weapons of war are prolific and have been actively engaged for years now.

WWIII isn't coming, it is here. And until people begin to see that, they will continue to be casualties of this war without a seeming shot being fired.

Humanity's numbers are being decimated by this ignorance. They've gas lit humanity to think the enemy is a race or a gender or a socio-economic status or a political faction. How tragic. The enemy is none of those things, yet it commandeers all of those things to subvert the truth.

At the risk of oversimplifying it, the enemies of God are the enemies of humanity. The battle is cosmic, but the battleground is earth. The ignorant are the greatest losers in the current battle because they're the pawns being used to advance the agenda.

Let's look at two things today: the battle on the earth, and the battle in the other dimensions.

The Battle on the Earth

[I'm just going to broad stroke this for brevity. I encourage you to dig into areas of interest for further understanding.]

Currently in America and the world at large, the attacks can be categorized easily into four areas:

The Mind

Obviously the mind is the seat of thought; thought leads to belief; belief leads to action. If you control the mind, you control the action. They attack this on many fronts, the most obvious being indoctrination (via education and employment) and propaganda (via media and all forms of entertainment). I could write a series of articles on just those two and the various implementations they use.

There are a myriad of subsections to each of those that incorporate things like redefining words, attaching shame and ridicule to belief structures, scorning alternative ideas, and assigning social pressure to anything contrary to the accepted narrative. Those are actually the more benign methods.

More troublesome than that is their use of chemicals and toxins to suppress the mind, whether it be in the form of legal, prescribed, and/or illicit drugs or through fluoride in the water (a known developmental neurotoxin), or through genetically modified foods, or environmental toxins, etc. The alarming statistics of autism, childhood mental disorders, and geriatric diseases like dementia, Alzheimer's, etc. have startling connections to environmental toxins and heavy metals, and yes, vaccines. These aren't accidental occurrences. One or two may be coincidental, but the epidemic-like increasing numbers cannot be. (What are they spraying in our skies 24/7??)

And even more nefarious than those are the technology advances they boast about through phones, frequencies, and other scientific and medical procedures. I'll spend more time on this one in the near future. The obvious conclusion is if you cripple the mind or in some way interfere with its ability to function properly, you have a mentally handicapped population unable to assess the threats against it and/or form a resistance and response to it.

The Body

They need the body weak for three primary reasons:

1. A weak body makes one unable or less willing to engage in the battle. How many adult Americans (percentage wise) can actually run a block without being winded, or can even run a block at all? How many can walk several miles, carry a load, move heavy objects, breathe without difficulty? It's hard to have a militia to stave off enemy combatants with weak-bodied people. Have you looked at America's health statistics vs. other countries? Maybe compare today's American's health statistics with the 50s, 60s, 70s, 80s...

2. A weak body consumes mental energy and distracts so that one's attention is constantly engaged in fixing the ailments of the body. A weak body leads to a compromised mind. If one's body is weak or compromised, it's hard to learn a trade or skill that is beneficial because one is consumed with trying to fix the body. When one needs healing, mental energy goes to doing just the basic tasks at hand that are necessary. There is no energy or fortitude to look at problems outside of the immediate need(s). Current events, community threats, and national needs have to wait because there is not enough energy to dedicate oneself to educating and responding.
3. A weak body is a tool for a medical industry that makes the body dependent on a system governed by those who want total control, and robs the person(s) of valuable financial resources for other things. When one is consumed with "fixing" ailments, diseases, disorders, one's finances are used to support the system in control. When that system is beholden to the slave masters wanting world dominion, the system produces exactly what the slave master tells it to. Healing cancer, disease, disorders, etc. will not fill their coffers, so they produce poisons to alleviate one symptom while creating ten more. The system has no interest in root cause or true healing. This cycle intensifies until the person is totally incapacitated or dead. A transference of wealth has happened because the persons' money fed the system and left them penniless and broken. The system grows while the people languish and die, robbing their progeny of an inheritance and worse, it encumbers or steals resources that could otherwise be used for the betterment of humanity and/or to fight the true enemy.

Unity

If we can't get along with one another, we can't fight a common enemy. It's that simple. Apparently their tactics are that simple as well: continually pit people groups against one another. If it's not race it's gender. If it's not gender it's income. If it's not income it's religion. If it's not religion it's education. If it's not education it's employment. The list goes on and on.

Humans have a lot of weaknesses, because humans (as a general rule) tend to glide through life without much intentional understanding. People like the path of least resistance. But people are woefully emotional. Emotions are most people's Achilles heel. So they stoke emotional outbursts by thinly veiled public drama that if reason prevailed would show it for the inciting charade it is. Then they control the public narrative so reason cannot prevail. Emotions do the rest, from mobs and riots, to slander, and almost eventually always into violence (especially when it's funded by the puppet masters).

It's embarrassing how easily humanity allows this manipulation. The end result is we refuse to work together for the good of humanity, because we've foolishly agreed upon an emotional delineation of pitting people into modern caste systems. It's selfish and foolish and plays right into the scheme of those in control.

The solution is quite simple, but emotions don't want solutions, they want revenge. Selfishness doesn't want solutions, it wants accommodation and preference.

Freedom

Freedom is the antithesis of control. People cannot be free for this battle for world dominion to be successful. So laws must be made, and freedoms must be destroyed, and people must be forced (through fear and coercion and deceit and bribery and a whole host of other things) to choose to give up personal freedom and to force others to do the same.

They'll have a hard time with this one in a direct attack. So they attack it on smaller fronts with clever cliches like "we're all in this together" and "do it for your neighbor" and "it takes all of us" and "end racism" and "words hurt", etc. The emotional ones will fall lockstep into this and agree that we must force some rules that restrict freedom for some exaggerated harm coming down the pike. That's how we get things like the misnomer Patriot Act, the TSA, amnesty, vaccine mandates, etc. It is almost always based on fear.

There are solutions to each of these categories that I'll address in coming articles.

The Battle in Other Dimensions

Because the average American (or person in general) is fighting battles in any or all of the four categories above, they are unable to see the battle actually has very little to do with them personally and is actually an epic battle of entities of far more power than flesh and blood.

It'll take me a few articles to lay this battle out. Remember how I explained the Supreme God created a group of gods before He created humans? Psalm 82 calls them the "Divine Council" and Scripture refers to them as the "sons of god". These sons of god, (lesser gods), rebelled against God by interfering in the affairs of men. This interference wrought the landscape on earth that is laid out by ancient texts, specifically Mesopotamian texts and in books not canonized in the Bible, as well as the Bible itself.

For most of human history, there was no one Bible, there were ancient scripts passed down from the scribes. We know them as books, but to those before us they were a collection of the history of man on the earth. That history included the interactions of men and women with the gods.

[I realize even addressing this is going to get me the coveted label of “heretic” (humor there), but I’m a seeker of truth AND a lover of God, and I have followed the truths to this point, which will offend mainstream Christianity that has neatly packaged a religion that creates more questions than it answers. If you’ll humor me and just look at the evidence of these things, you may not draw the same conclusions as I have, but you may be able to see, perceive and understand some things that actually help you navigate some otherwise difficult waters. Just at least look at some of the evidence? □]

Without getting into the history (right here and now), the basic point is these “sons of god” were rejected by God. (Read Psalm 82) They appealed to Enoch to intercede for forgiveness for their transgressions, and after petitioning God, Enoch had to report back to them that there would be no forgiveness for them (Enoch 11-12). Their sins were not forgiven by God, and they would be punished. From there the battle escalated, with humanity the continual casualty of this war.

Many books and historical documents lay out that these gods are all the gods that the Bible lays out. Moloch, Baal, Ashtoreth, etc.

are just renames of older gods. The famous ten plagues of Exodus were specific plagues to reveal to the world (Egypt was the world power at the time) the inability of the pantheon of gods to thwart the

#	PLAGUE	EGYPTIAN DEITY TARGETED
1	Water turned to blood Ex 7:14-25	Hapi — god of the Nile Osiris — Nile was his bloodstream Khnum — guardian of the Nile
2	Frogs Ex 8:1-15	Heqet — goddess of birth, with a frog head Hapi — frog goddess of Egypt
3	Gnats/mosquitoes Ex 8:16-19	Seb — god of the desert
4	Flies Ex 8:20-32	Uatchit — the fly god of Egypt
5	Livestock epidemic Ex 9:1-7	Hathor — goddess with a cow head Apis — the bull god, symbol of fertility Mnevis — sacred bull of Heliopolis
6	Boils Ex 9:8-12	Sekhmet — goddess with power over disease Sunu — the pestilence god Isis — goddess of healing
7	Hail Ex 9:13-25	Nut — a sky goddess Osiris — god of crops and fertility Set — god of storms Seth — protector of crops
8	Locusts Ex 10:1-20	Nut — a sky goddess Osiris — god of crops and fertility Seth — protector of crops
9	Darkness Ex 10:21-29	Re, Aten, Atum, Horus — all sun gods Nut, Hathor — sky goddesses
10	Death of the first born Ex 11:1-12:30	Min — god of reproduction Isis — goddess who protected children Heqet — goddess of birth Pharaoh's first born son — a god

Supreme God. God took on the gods of the most powerful nation at the time, and removed His people from their midst by defeating the Egyptian gods.

These gods trace back to Nimrod and the famous Babylon of old. Do you find it interesting at all that the gods on the landscape of Genesis are the same ones alluded to in Revelation? How can you explain the mighty angel's words at the close of Revelation 18 that in Babylon was found the blood of "prophets and saints and all who have been slain on the earth"? Were all the prophets and all the saints of God murdered in Babylon? Is EVERYONE who has been slain on the earth from Babylon? Or is it describing the seat of the religion that slaughtered the men and women of God, and is responsible for the slaughter of countless men and women?

Ancient Babylon was the seat of the ancient gods who set up government, religion and culture in opposition to the Supreme God. The religion they set up was the worship and adherence to the sons of god, rather than the Supreme God. Their names change with the region and languages they're in and from. Look at the days of the week and the names of the months. Each was named after a Roman god or its equivalent. Each Roman god is another name for an Egyptian god, for a Greek god, for a Norse god, for a Phoenician god, for a Babylonian god...

Enter Christ. The true Son of God. He took His disciples to what He called "the gates of hell" in the region of Caesarea Philippi, the northern part of Bashan at the foot of Mount Hermon. Mount Hermon is the place the Watchers (sons of god) descended to earth to commit their first crimes. Bashan was considered the gateway to the underworld. Dr. Heiser calls Bashan "ground zero for Old Testament geography". He devotes a whole chapter (33) to Bashan and its history Biblically in his book The Unseen Realm.

In Jonathan Cahn's book The Return of the Gods, he carefully lays out the origin of words in Scripture that depicts these gods. He addressed the clash of the gods against the Son of God and the resulting war against the message His followers brought. Their gods were being challenged and they responded with violence, killing the Christians in an attempt to negate the message that there was a God higher than the ones they worshiped. He told a fascinating story of the Roman pagan emperor Julian the Apostate who attempted to restore the Oracle of Delphi's temple in 362 A.D. He sent for their version of a prophet to get guidance for the restoration. The recorded answer was deafening:

"Tell the emperor that my hall has fallen to the ground. Phoebus [the god Apollo] no longer has his house, nor his mantic bay nor his prophetic spring; the water has dried up."

Christ had defeated the gods on their own turf, and the fallout was tremendous. We find ourselves in 2024 where the ancient gods who went underground have resurfaced with a vengeance. The scene on the earth has changed since they were dethroned, and their tactics have changed. This is what we'll get into in the coming weeks.

In my next article I'll expound on this and attempt to link current events to this battle, as well as speculate on why it has crescendoed so incredibly in the last couple decades.

© 2023 Ms. Smallback – All Rights Reserved

E-Mail Ms. Smallback: M.Smallback@cox.net