

Executive Orders are NOT Laws

By Lex Greene

September 27, 2023

Most Americans have been gaslighted to believe that White House Executive Orders are laws that every American must follow, or else. But Executive Orders only apply to Executive Branch employees. The U.S. government formed by the U.S. Constitution is a Republic, not a dictatorship. It's not a pure "democracy" either, nor should it ever be.

Executive Orders are limited to directives to Executive Branch employees only, to properly execute the laws passed by Congress, and only so long as the order is itself lawful and constitutional. Executive Branch Orders apply to no one else, period. Unless we accept that we now live in a dictatorship...of course.

For the record, court opinions are NOT laws either, as only Congress is granted the authority to make laws under the Constitution. No other branch has any lawmaking authority whatsoever. In addition, even Congress is limited in authority to create laws which are "in furtherance thereof."

In the United States, "laws that are repugnant to the Constitution are null and void," as affirmed by the Marbury v. Madison case (circa 1803)

So, literally everything government has done since 1803 that is "repugnant to the Constitution," to include the Bill of Rights, is "null and void." This includes Executive Orders falsely applied to people beyond Executive Branch employees, and all attempts to “create law” from the Judicial Branch, as well as any laws passed by Congress which are at odds with the Constitution.

Because most Americans have not paid attention to what their government has been up to for more than a hundred years, more than 80% of what the federal government does today is “repugnant to the Constitution” and enjoys no force of law behind it at all.

Study this legal reality for yourself and remember it every time your government tries to dictate policy to you through unlawful and unconstitutional acts. As we head into another fake election season, keep this in mind as the government will attempt to create another “emergency” in order to use unlawful and unconstitutional election processes to control the outcome of the elections.

Most importantly, use this information to protect yourselves and loved ones from “orders” (aka mandates) which have no force of law at all, under the U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights.

© 2023 Lex Greene – All Rights Reserved

E-Mail Lex Greene: lexgreene23@mailfence.com