

Four tribes competing for supremacy: Diversity, multiculturalism

Part 1: The façade of diversity, multiculturalism and co-existence in America. Tribes and racial conflict.

“All ethnic groups or tribes feel more comfortable among themselves. Like all of nature, human tribes in the modern world compete for dominance. Call it pecking order or the struggle for survival, but it’s in humans’ DNA to fight for one’s tribe.”

America today faces its greatest fracturing and fragmentation since the Civil War in 1861 to 1865. Back then, whites fought whites to stop slavery. A mind-numbing 620,000 men died on the battlefield while tens of thousands sustained horrific war wounds—which if taken as a percentage of today’s population, the toll equaled six million deaths.

But today, America faces a new kind of quandary. It features four major ethnic groups struggling for dominance. Caucasians, Africans, Latinos and Muslims! The whites hang on to a majority of 54 percent, down from 90 percent in 1965. Within 26 years by 2042, Hispanics will become the new majority. Blacks continue their birth rates to remain in third place on the population ladder. But the most aggressive of tribes, followers of Islam, prove the most provocative in their birth rates and ability to “seed” foreign countries with their followers from war-torn Middle Eastern Islamic nations and the overpopulation overload of Africa.

Our way of life remains completely out of bounds to Islam. This 4-minute video explains our plight.

They all flood into America!

No matter how you cut the cloth of America's future, the more you add countless third world millions from 190 different countries around the world—multiculturalism, tribalism and diversity will create the “perfect storm” for this civilization's downfall in the 21st century.

You're seeing it happen at breakneck speed in Europe, Canada and Australia. The greater numbers of immigrants, the faster the disintegration of Western countries' ethos and cohesiveness. The flood of refugees cannot be sustained on a sociological level let alone a water, energy and resource level.

Tribes, slavery, racism!

For the record, slavery began with the advent of the first human tribes that conquered other tribes on the battlefield. Once a victorious tribe found it could dominate other tribes, it grew in power and acreage. For the sake of history, most know the Romans as the most powerful tribe in antiquity. Slaves built the aqueducts, roads, coliseums and cities of the Roman Empire. Evidence still remains all over Europe and Africa.

Additionally, the Incas, Mayans, Persians and Trojans became great powers that incorporated slaves. Those unfortunates built stone roads, bridges and dramatic cities with their toils. In modern times, Great Britain enslaved its colonies such as India, to rape its resources and enslave its people.

Those ethnic groups felt no moral compunction, ethical responsibility or sense of humanity. Christians, Muslims, Hindus and dozens of other religious groups employed slavery.

Once the Mayflower landed on North America, slavery continued its cruel cycle all over again. As the Industrial Age accelerated, slaves toiled, built roads and picked cotton in the new American colonies.

Down through history, any ethnic group that conquered another employed its power via violence or the threat of violence to utilize slaves. Slaves come in all colors, but for some arcane reason, Africans seem to have borne the brunt of slavery down through time. They still enslave each other in Africa in the 21st century.

Ben Franklin, Alexander Hamilton, George Washington and Thomas Jefferson owned slaves. They beat them, broke their families apart on the auction block and stripped them of their freedom, religions, languages, cultures and way of life.

While Lincoln signed the Proclamation of Emancipation in 1865, giving freedom to all people--racial unrest, racism, bias and racial tension remains thick in every city in America where blacks and whites abide.

If you look at the Latino invasion, notice entire cities turned into one Hispanic region such as Miami or Los Angeles or many towns in Texas. One look at the new Muslim tribe, everyone fears treading into the 'no go zones' such as Detroit, Minneapolis and Miami.

While America grew to a 90 percent Caucasian, 7 percent African and 3 percent Hispanic by 1965--that changed with the Immigration Reform Act that same year. Back in 1965, someone, somewhere decided that America needed to be broken into racial pieces. Congress pumped into America over 100,000,000 (million) different people from 190 different tribes from around the world in the past 51 years.

I equate this multicultural experiment to a bunch of high school students who have no idea of the consequences of throwing 190 different chemicals into a lab jar to see what happens: it will either melt the jar or the entire concoction explodes.

Today, the buzzwords of multiculturalism and diversity ring from collegiate bell towers all the way to the NFL. Everyone talks about 'diversity' in the workplace, but most folks return to their 'white' or 'black' or Hispanic neighborhoods.

Unfortunately, while we struggled through Civil Rights of the 1960s, today in America, you notice news reports on "racial unrest" such as Ferguson, Missouri or Baltimore, Maryland. You read about black on black crime, black on white crime and prejudice as to job discrimination, daily. Black Lives Matter leaders call for the killing of white cops. And, they DO kill white cops, execution style!

Facebook illustrates tribal battles with Muslims, Christians and African-Americans. After all these years and all our education, racial tensions accelerate with every confrontation with police or mayors or in the workplace.

It appears that racial groups lack any ability to peacefully co-exist. While everyone faces forced integration in the workplace and sports fields—most hang with and go back to their own racial groups in their own neighborhoods.

As a world bicycle traveler who pedaled through countless countries and cultures, I respect all races, colors and ethnic groups. I'm not too thrilled with some religions and what they do to their followers or the rest of us, i.e., Islam. At the same time, I've seen racial unrest, conflict and violence. Every person on this planet does the best he or she can to live his or her life as best as possible. Most want peace, but many provoke conflicts. And, all groups band together to fight the other tribal group when it comes down to water, food and/or turf.

Today in America, whether it's the Mexicans invading from the south or the Muslims flooding in from Africa or the African-Americans struggling in the ghettos—I think we face enormous biological-tribal conflict from too many ethnic groups vying against one another to maintain turf, language and culture.

We face an added 100 million legal immigrants within 30 years.

That mind-blowing number creates a dilemma to the point of no solutions. We either stop mass immigration immediately, or face irreversible consequences and unsolvable problems.
