

Harvesting Baby Organs, Part 2

Pastor Roger Anghis

What began as supposed 'reproductive healthcare' for women has turned into a form of birth control that always puts the baby on the short end. Our unborn children end up paying the ultimate price for the bad decisions of others. But it has taken an even more sinister turn in the last few years. We are seeing a barbaric practice of abortionists selling baby parts for profit. They get paid to abort the baby then get more money for their parts. I'm trying to wrap my head around the concept of American 'doctors' participating in such a despicable, vile and barbaric operation.

People don't think about what is happening here. They say that a fetus is not a human. If it isn't, then what is it? If it is a human when it's born, then it is a human when it's conceived. It can be nothing else. We have laws that protect an eagle that is still in the egg because an eagle laid the egg, therefore it has to be an eagle. It is the same biological process that develops the eagle in the egg as develops the baby in the womb of its mother. The only difference is the egg is an external womb. Why is there protection for the bird but not the human baby? Money!

Last week, a California abortionist testified under oath that there is "no question" abortionists are allowing babies to be born alive in order to harvest their organs, a report from LifeSiteNews revealed.

Testifying during a preliminary hearing in the criminal case against undercover journalists David Daleiden and Sandra Merritt earlier in the month, Dr. Forrest Smith outlined gruesome details of the abortion business, of which he said Daleiden and Merritt only captured the “tip of the iceberg” with their shocking undercover videos.

“Smith testified that it is almost certain that some of the abortionists featured in the undercover videos deliberately altered abortion procedures in a way that both led to the birth of living babies with beating hearts, and put women at risk. The goal in these cases would be to obtain fresher, more intact organs,” LifeSiteNews reported.[1]

How far have we fallen as a society when we begin to use human body parts for ‘medicinal’ purposes? Skincare for aging skin is on the top of everyone’s list when it comes to beauty and style. There’s no doubt that we all love to avoid wrinkles and want that glow you see on our favorite talent.

Sandra Bullock and Cate Blanchett have sworn by a new, funny but worthwhile product to help with skincare for aging skin. It’s a $650 dollar “penis facial.” Yes, you read that right, a “penis facial.” The facial is also known as “Hollywood EGF Facial,” and many stars in the limelight swear that it helps with radiant and glowing skin.

Blanchett opened up about her secret skincare for aging skin back in March 2018. She shared the special facial at esthetician Georgia’s Lousie’s New York Skincare atelier has a nickname “The Penis Facial,” because of the treatments ingredients.

Thursday she opened up to Ellen DeGeneres about this special treatment for aging skin. She said:

“The serum is an extraction from a piece of skin that came from a young person far, far away.” And they both hold back a giggle. But Ellen DeGeneres couldn’t hold back and bluntly points out, the EGF is derived from “foreskin from a Korean baby.” [2]

Planned Parenthood has made fortunes aborting babies and then compounded those fortunes selling body parts from the aborted babies. The Planned Parenthood executive who in 2015 was caught on tape joking about selling baby organs to get a Lamborghini was once again caught haggling over the price of organs harvested from the bodies of aborted babies.

In a new video by the Center for Medical Progress, Dr. Mary Gatter, president of the Medical Directors Council for the nation’s largest abortion provider, is negotiating the price of organs.

“I did it in LA,” she said about harvesting organs from aborted babies bodies in exchange for money. “I’m committed to it, I think it’s a great idea.”

“What kind of volume do you need and what gestational ages?” she brusquely asks before launching into a negotiation.

“You know, you have to pay a little money to use the space,” she said, implying that the organ harvesters, not Planned Parenthood employees, would be doing all the work.

When a Center for Medical progress investigator posing as an organ buyer tells Gatter they’re looking to pay $50 per specimen, she responds that the amount offered is simply not enough.

“Yeah, fifty’s on the low end,” Gatter says. “Fifty (per specimen) was like 12 years ago.”

Under federal law, Planned Parenthood can be reimbursed for the costs of harvesting organs, but the details of this informal arrangement make it clear the abortion provider would not have any costs. [3]

Human body parts trafficking is not legal but is being done on a daily basis and there are judges in place that actually facilitate the business. Over the last two weeks in the ongoing federal civil jury trial of Planned Parenthood against David Daleiden, Judge William Orrick, an Obama appointee, has repeatedly cut off defense questioning that he considers straying too close to eliciting information related to Planned Parenthood's history of selling tissue from aborted fetuses.

Planned Parenthood is suing undercover journalist David Daleiden and others associated with his organization, Center for Medical Progress (CPM), alleging that Daleiden and his team committed illegal wiretapping, trespassing, breaches of confidentiality, and more. The challenge that Planned Parenthood attorneys have accepted is to make the case that Daleiden and his team illegally recorded private conversations, without admitting what exactly those conversations were about.

But it's not just the plaintiffs who don't want the jury to consider the potentially illegal activities happening at Planned Parenthood clinics. Judge Orrick laid out the ground rules to the jury in his opening statements on Day One, saying this case "is not about the truth of whether plaintiffs profited from the sale of fetal tissue or otherwise violated the law in securing tissue for those programs," and adding that, "those issues are a matter of dispute between the parties in the world outside this courtroom." [4]

This is what happens when this vile and barbaric industry is exposed. The ones exposing it are put on trial. God warned us in 2 Chronicles_19:6 "And said to the judges, Take heed what ye do: for ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who is with you in the judgment." This judge failed his mandate.
