

Harvesting Baby Organs, Part 3

Roger Anghis

The fight to expose this industry is being pushed back by people in high places. David Daleiden and Sandra Merritt, citizen journalists with the Center for Medical Progress, produced videos of this illegal practice and were charged with fifteen felony counts of illegal taping; As the second week of preliminary criminal hearings against undercover journalists David Daleiden and Sandra Merritt continue to reveal gruesome admissions of baby body part trafficking in a San Francisco court, mainstream media outlets remain uncharacteristically silent about an important First Amendment case.

Daleiden and Merritt, citizen journalists with the Center for Medical Progress, are charged with 15 felony counts of illegal taping of confidential information, in which they exposed the illegal activity of Planned Parenthood and the human tissue procurement company, StemExpress. Four days into the hearings, significant and graphic details about StemExpress' business steadily emerge, such as their supplying of beating fetal hearts and intact fetal heads to medical researchers. Yet a quick search for Daleiden's name across national and local news sites (The New York Times, CNN, The San Francisco Chronicle, The L.A. Times) turns up zero stories on the hearings.

Why would reporters find no interest in a case's outcome that could result in serious implications on their own First Amendment rights as journalists? And a case with click-grabbing, alarmingly graphic details to boot? The answer, it is two-fold.

First, is the inconvenient fact that this case exists, not because there is a consensus that Daleiden's videos were actually illegal, but because former California attorney general Kamala Harris sought to prosecute Daleiden at the behest of her political donors at Planned Parenthood. Even though Daleiden's unreleased footage should have been protected by the California Shield Law, Harris ordered a search warrant against Daleiden in 2016 and a raid of his apartment, seizing his computer, camera equipment, and footage. [1]

Notice that the Attorney General who brought the charges against David Daleiden and Sandra Merrit is none other than presidential hopeful Kamala Harris, the one that slept with Willie Brown to work her way up the political ladder in the most corrupt State in the country, California.[2] She has even declared that all presidential candidates need to declare availability to abortions should be a priority: Kamala Harris is an ardent abortion activist – no pro-life voter could be addlepatated about that.[3]

But Harris wants to make sure Democrat presidential primary voters know she's staunching in favor of abortion as many babies as possible, right up to birth. Harris is so pro-abortion she just told an audience that killing babies in abortions is something that should be declared "a priority."

Naturally, Harris wrapped this horrific reality in language about so-called "reproductive rights." [3]

general's primary witness. In it, the AG focused almost entirely on the security and application process for NAF trade shows. Daleiden attended trade shows in disguise and secretly recorded conversations with Planned Parenthood employees.

After Fowler, Doe 7 took the stand, a non-physician who performed surgical abortions for Planned Parenthood Northern California. She testified she regularly provided fetal tissue from the abortions she did and heard of money exchanges with StemExpress. When presented video evidence of her conversation with Daleiden, Doe 7 testified that numerous third parties could overhear the conversation, an important point of debate in the charge of eavesdropping.

In the final minutes of Tuesday's hearing, Doe 3, a third-trimester abortionist, took the stand, at which time the AG's office played a nearly 20-minute, never-before-released undercover video of a conversation between her and Daleiden, described by some in the courtroom as "shocking." [4]

It has been said that the most dangerous place in America is in a mother's womb. The lie that women need access to abortion for reproductive healthcare is nothing but a farce. Keep in mind that abortion has always been available IF the life of the mother is at stake. From the day the battle over abortion began, the pro-life movement has been saying that repeat abortions are a natural and logical progression of the abortion reality. Statistics published by even pro-abortion organizations like The Alan Guttmacher Institute, as well as the U.S. Government's Centers for Disease Control, reveals that we have been right all along. The data shows that, (a) about 35% of all American women of child-bearing age will have had at least one abortion by age 45 (b) approximately half of all abortions are repeat abortions, (c) repeat abortions are on the rise, and (d) only a tiny fraction of abortions are done for the so-called "hard cases" such as rape, incest, life-of-the-mother, or fetal anomalies.

Incredibly, Poppema is saying that because many women who have abortions were contracepting, that proves they are not using abortion as contraception. In fact, it proves just the opposite! Hillard's figures clearly show that abortion is being routinely used as "back-up" birth control. [5]

What society has allowed is an environment that requires no responsibilities for the actions of the members of society. We hold the life of a baby to nothing more than what its body parts are worth. A girl in school can't get an aspirin without parental approval but she can get an abortion without parental knowledge! Is that where we want to be as a society?

2nd Kings 21:16 tells us: Moreover Manasseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another; beside his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD. Is there any more innocent blood than that of an unborn baby? Manasseh sacrificed his own child to the false god Molech and encouraged all Judah to do the same. It goes without saying that God did not approve then and He doesn't approve today. God can and will forgive those who have sought and had abortions but there has to be repentance for this abominable act. Doctors who perform these procedures had better look at what they are doing. Murder has never been an option that God approves of. There is a lake of fire waiting for those that disregard the commandments of God.

We have allowed it to happen. By 'we' I'm speaking of the church. God will hold the sinner to task for their actions, but He will hold the church accountable for stand aside and letting the heathens run the world.

The Founders intended for all of the population to be involved in placing people in places of authority and they intended for us to put men and women of high character. John Jay stated: "Providence has given to our people the choice of their rulers, and it is the duty, as well as the privilege and interest, of our Christian nation to select and prefer Christians for their rulers.” Sam Adams stated: “The public cannot be too curious concerning the characters of public men.” It is time we began placing men and women of godly character in places of authority.
