

How To Destroy A Nation From Within

The United States of America, the republic was founded on noble principles. The United States Bill of Rights was written with a unique sense of the importance of recognizing and preserving our unalienable rights which come from God, not government. The Constitution begins with "We the People" of the United States, in order to form a more Perfect Union, establish Justice, insure Domestic Tranquility, provide for the Common Defense, promote the General Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty, to Ourselves and our Posterity, to ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of America.

One should then conclude that our form of government, should not only look out for the preservation of our own individual rights, but also for the best interest of our republic. There are several ways a nation can protect its own interests. One of the most common approaches is a powerful central government that dominates the people with an iron fist from cradle to grave. Such governments usually threaten to destroy anyone who dares not to display total allegiance to the state. North Korea is a supreme example of such dreadful arrangements.

In the case of the United States of America, the government was not originally designed to brutally rule over the "People." But rather, was formed to defend the right of everyone to live for their own sake and that of their families, not at the behest of big government. In America, loyalty is or should be expected as a bi-product of an appreciation for the numerous blessings of for example, Liberty of or from religion. The freedom to bear arms for self, family and property protection is a major part of our national heritage, along with recognition of our unalienable rights which come from God, not government.

To recapture and maintain the blessings of Liberty, we must remain vigilant in making sure the principles to perpetuate Liberty are vigorously passed down to succeeding generations. Parents, educators and even ministers are responsible for either blessing or cursing our republic. What is taught to one generation dictates the direction our nation takes during the next generation.

In the Bible, it is written, My people perish for lack of knowledge. It is also known that a nation is nothing more than a large collection of people. What they know or do not know and care or not care about are major factors in whether they exhibit wisdom, a sense of national unity and patriotism are predicated upon what is taught to the students. Since the inception of our great republic, there has been a cadre of people who have wanted to undermine and fundamentally change America into a much lesser nation. They were small in number compared to the general population that appreciated the United States and wanted her to be the "Shining City on a Hill Nation."

Eventually those leftists opposing American greatness, just like parasites they invaded the schools, many churches and in time even corrupted the concept of family life. The government schools of indoctrination have done a masterful job of convincing individuals like former Senator John Kerry who as a result set out on a life long mission to undermine America. He negotiated a horrible nuclear arms deal with Iran during the Obama administration that only benefited Iran and included a 150 billion dollar taxpayer funded payoff. That is bad enough, but the indoctrinated egotistical John "Lurch" Kerry traveled the globe meeting with world leaders to preserve his abysmal Iran nuclear arms deal and Obama's legacy.

John (I'm all that) Kerry counselled officials of other nations and convinced them to go against President Trump and remain in that potentially dangerous nuclear arms deal. But only Iran and stupid European nations that can make a little short term money on the side benefit while Iran would be free in a few years to build nuclear weapons like crazy. President Trump had no choice but go it alone and pull out of a deal with an Islamic nation that threatens both America and Israel. Former secretary of state John Kerry represents how a nation can potentially be destroyed from within. He is a home grown indoctrinated traitor from within who was trained up in the way "he should not go" and has been on the wrong side of history ever since.

Unless there is a permanent change in what is being indoctrinated into our students, our dear republic could be destined for doom and destruction. Such a dismal fate does not need to come to fruition, because it is completely avoidable, if "We the People" have the will and desire to see the good ship USA righted again so she can be great again on a long term basis.
