Wiles Spills To Vanity Fair

I can no longer give White House Chief of Staff, Susie Wiles, the “benefit of the doubt”. She has proven herself to be unworthy of our trust. She is either too greedy, egotistical or careless to be entrusted with such a key job as top White House Aide to President Trump. That, or she is one of the enemy.

Wiles serves not only the President we elected, but also, the citizens of this nation. As one of those citizens who fervently LOVE this country, I very much resent what she has done. Read on.

“Susie Wiles, rarely speaks out, but a year’s worth of on-the-record conversations dropped Tuesday in a blockbuster Vanity Fair profile that has rocked the White House,” says Mediaite.

Supposedly, Susie is all upset at how the information was published. Oh, spare me, please. She spills her guts to a left-wing rag and is upset when they use it against the White House?!?

Here are bullet points of what she said.

On tariffs: she said that there was much disagreement about the concept, and that Trump just followed his gut. Susie said she told everyone to just find a way to go along. But, they “couldn’t do it.” Leaving the reader to assume much fractiousness within Trump’s inner circle.

On the Cabinet members: She has made up names for some of them, and instead of keeping them to herself where they belong, she shared them, too, with Vanity Fair. “JD Vance has been a conspiracy theorist for decades” (only lefties even USE that term!) but says she’s support him for POTUS 2028. By 2028, he may not want that...

On OUR PRESIDENT: Wiles says Donald Trump has an “alcoholic personality”. A man who has never had a drink. Susie must know what that is from personal experience.

She explained that she does not mean substance abuse, but a temperament defined by exaggerated confidence and risk-taking. Trump, she said, “operates [with] a view that there’s nothing

he can't do. Nothing, zero, nothing." I call that extreme confidence, and so far, he has been that person.

I would so prefer a leader who has confidence instead of those who lie and hide from everything and everyone. Donald Trump knows that our world is at the point where, if he does NOT take those risks, our republic and all those who depend on it are finished. Susie only knows that Vanity Fair pays well, apparently.

On the Epstein saga: She's afraid that Trump is going to take a hit from the "Joe Rogan crowd", the podcast junkies, because they want to know everything about that salacious Epstein Island crowd. She did manage to criticize Bondi on her handling of the case. But, get this: Wiles defended Bill Clinton, saying that there is no evidence that he ever played with the Epstein crowd!! She says Trump is just "wrong about that". At the same time, Wiles confirmed Trump does appear in Epstein material – though she insists it is not incriminating.

On Trump attempting to convict his enemies: Susie says that his going after Comey et. al., is going to look "vindictive", and she cannot say why it should not. Just wow. The concept of vindication is based on defense. Defending ones self against attacks from others.

In my mind, Donald James Trump deserves every bit of 'vindication' he can get, after the decade of legal AND PHYSICAL attacks he has suffered at the hands of the country he now is trying to serve. God bless him for what he is doing.

On Trump's harsh words for women journalists: Susie calls him a counter-puncher. For once I agree. I wish she would have said more in his defense.

On Venezuela: "He wants to keep on blowing boats up until Venezuelan president Nicolás Maduro cries uncle," she said, revealing that 'it's not about the drugs alone." Though most of us have figured that out, it is NOT the business of a trusted staffer to reveal our foreign policy on such a sensitive issue!

For this alone, I believe she should be fired immediately.

On Trump's running for a third term: Ms Mouth says flatly, "no", he is not, but that he is having fun with the outrage it creates.

Read the Mediate article I've linked here. She also blathered about Musk taking drugs, which she now rescinds. She says that the interviewer misquoted her, and supposedly Karolyn Leavitt agrees. I really don't care. Wiles deserves what she got. What did she THINK a leftist rag would do with the information she tossed their way?? If she was surprised, that means she is not fit for her office.

In reality, I'm afraid, Susie is owned by the opposition. Somehow I've always known it, but wanted to give the situation every benefit of the doubt.

Well, that ends here and now. Wiles has proven herself unworthy of those benefits, and of the President's confidence, in my humble opinion.

All we can say is that we know that Donald Trump believes in keeping his friends close and his enemies closer. I have to believe that such a smart capable man as our President knows which is which.
