

Madonna: “I’ve given a lot of thought to blowing up the white house”

During the Obama inauguration eight years ago, not one conservative, Republican, Libertarian, Democrat or independent violently demonstrated in the streets, burned cars, yelled obscenities or smashed windows.

U.S. Senators and Congressional House members praised the new African-Kenyan-American president as a new day for racial peace in America.

During the Trump inauguration, last month, millions demonstrated against his presidency before it began. Demonstrators fought police, burned cars, smashed windows, yelled obscenities and threatened violence toward the new president.

Singer Madonna screamed her invectives, “I’ve given a lot of thought to blowing up the White House.”

Actress Ashley Judd yelled, “I’m a nasty woman and I say Trump’s a Hitler with a toupee!”

Congressman John Lewis (D-GA), said, “I don’t look at Trump as a legitimate president.”

Congresswoman Maxine Waters (D-CA) said, “This man is questionable. And because we have suspicions – many of us – about who he is, where he came from, what his actions are, and all of his conflicts ... we have to find out more about him and some of that leads to the possibility of impeachment.”

At first, I thought she spoke about how Barack Obama slipped into the White House without anyone knowing his true identity, (which, by the way, we still don’t know), but instead, she railed against Trump.

A group of students threatened to “moon” the entrance of Trump Towers in protest to the new president’s election.

Actress Sarah Silverman said, “We need a violent coup!”

One lady held a placard, “If Trump’s not Hitler, I am a moron!”

Actress Meryl Streep, much beloved lady of America, spoke against Trump at the Golden Globes while ignoring the fact that four African-American teens beat, cut and violated a Caucasian mentally disabled boy for five hours while they featured it on Facebook—that very same day.

Social media created a hash-tag, “He’s not my president” that received 180,000 likes within hours.

In the bastion of free speech, University of California at Berkley, last weekend, students threw steel racks through windows while starting fires in the streets because they refused to hear the speech of a conservative speaker.

In other words, they violently opposed our 1st Amendment rights to free speech. That kind of behavior occurs in dictatorships.

This week, I personally saw a video where Senator Schumer (D-NY) stood in front of an audience to lead a chant, “Dump Trump, Dump Trump, Dump Trump.”

Have you ever heard of a Banana Republic?

This kind of violent anti-American behavior reminds me that none of the name callers, demonstrators or hoodlums marching through our streets understands that we live in a Constitutional Republic. The person with the most Electoral College votes wins. Even with the potential for millions of illegal alien votes in her favor, Hillary Clinton lost.

Writer John Porter from Arkansas said, "I have been for quite some time honestly trying to understand why, and to make some sense of the terrible, senseless and sometimes tragic display of people in their destructive pillaging, looting, burning of automobiles and destruction of other property, including businesses and college campus structures, and of course physically attacking other fellow Americans in various cities all across this nation. I'm sure some of the participants are apparent crazed individuals still smarting and upset over the results of our presidential election. But it has now become apparent and recognized by most that a great number of these people are masked and/or hooded thugs, paid professional demonstrators, being financed by George Soros and other groups for the purpose of disrupting, not only the agenda of our new president, but more importantly and dangerously so, the very system of government we have in this country."

Fellow American, I can tell you this: I have traveled through countries that lack the rule of law. I witnessed human misery that few Americans understand. I've watched human misery on a level that tears at my heart, years later. I've seen where brutal dictators and ruling class despots kill citizens without blinking an eye. In Saudi Arabia and that region, they 'honor kill' 20,000 women annually via Islamic law. They kill gays for being gay. They cut little girls. They chop peoples' heads off and stone women to death for being a woman.

To all the women who marched in favor of Muslim immigration last week in light of Trump's ban to secure our safety: if they understood that those same Muslims, if they gained a majority in our country, would subject them to Sharia Law, which means they would all be stoned to death or decapitated for exercising free speech. Muslim men don't tolerate any kind of a voice by any woman.

As America Continues Endless Immigration, We All Face A Rough Ride

As fragmented and fractured as we stand today, each year, we import 1.5 million legal and illegal immigrants without pause. That continued act of Congress dooms us to this:

“Diversity within a nation destroys unity and leads to civil wars,” said social scientist Garret Hardin. “Immigration, a benefit during the youth of a nation, can act as a disease in its mature state. Too much internal diversity in large nations has led to violence and disintegration. We are now in the process of destabilizing our own country. The magic words of destabilizers are ‘diversity’ and ‘multiculturalism’.”

President Trump presents a springboard (excuse) for all the demonstrators. In reality, the majority of Americans voted for him to protect them from Islamic terror, drugs coming up from the Mexico and enforcing our borders by stopping all illegal immigration. He needs to rescind the 1965 Immigration Reform Act along with his other Executive Orders in order to save us from multicultural chaos and total breakdown of our nation.
