

Remembering A Life Well Lived – J.D. Pendry

Kelleigh Nelson

*Blessed are those who mourn, for they will be comforted.–
Matthew 5:4*

Before you read the beautifully written obituary by JD Pendry's son, let me tell you about my friendship with him. Years ago, I came across his WordPress account and loved what he had written. Short, to the point, and always with a lesson. Some of his writings made me weep, some made me laugh, and others made me think. But then others gave me inspiration and ideas. I mentioned to him that he was so well written that he needed a larger audience and introduced him to NewsWithViews and Paul Walter.

His articles appeared at NWVs for over a year and also at his own WordPress page. Every time I wrote an article, it would first appear at NWVs and then later at JD's blog, American Freedom Journal. So many wonderful people also wrote for him and the articles were always of interest.

His last message to me was that he couldn't sit at the computer because he had what he thought was a horrible pneumonia. I talked with his son a few times while JD was in hospital, and we kept praying for mercy and healing, but God's perfect will was to bring JD home to Him.

Those of us who knew him will miss him terribly, and our condolences and prayers go out to his wife, "Susie Q" and his son and family. Till we meet again JD!
