

The Coronation in the UK

By Shirley Edwards

May 13, 2023

[These are my views as a woman living in England, on how the culture and spirit of my country has changed over 50 years. Why the country does not feel protected or strong any more, how it has lost, and is losing its values and decency, and how we are daily losing our free speech.]

May 6th, 2023, will no doubt go down in the history books as being a jubilant and glorious celebration for the people of the UK; an event attended by dignitaries and presidents from all corners of the world.

List of guests at the coronation of Charles III and Camilla – Wikipedia

The crowning of 74-year-old King Charles III of the UK, will also be portrayed and broadcast to the world by the images of well-wishers lining the streets of London, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Justin Welby, placing the infamous crown upon his head, and all of the pageantry and pomp which England is well known for in its association with royalty.

Images of his family, including his grandchildren and his prodigal son, Prince Harry will also be expounded upon, sometimes in a non-factual or speculative manner, but mainly it will be to the favour of indicating that this family is no different to yours and mine in an affectionate, yet sometimes troubled history.

Under different circumstances, and possibly under the same era of the coronation of his mother, Queen Elizabeth II during her coronation on 2nd June 1953 at the age of 25, the atmosphere and the images portrayed for 2023 may have been an accurate representation of the event. However, the general consensus across the country and the atmosphere outside of the history book representation which is being portrayed across the world, is completely different.

Memories

For those of us born before 1980, our memories of Charles, the first-born son to Queen Elizabeth II are of a rather awkward young man waiting in line to fulfil his destiny. Someone who we believed would never get married. A man who was rarely shown affection. He later went on to become endearingly interested in organic farming and talking to plants and trees, showing what we thought was a sensitive and holistic side to his nature. However, Charles later went on to become a man who was later revealed to have always had another lover, even on the eve of his wedding to the late Princess Diana of Wales. He was not starved of affection.

During his marriage, the obvious attention which was paid to Princess Diana appeared to create some enmity between them. He is famously known to have commented it would have been easier to have 2 wives so that he could have one of either side of him during royal walk-about.

However, after Diana's death and despite the country's acceptance of his mistress, who later became his wife; Camilla Parker Bowles then became HRH The Duchess of Cornwall, and is now Her Majesty the Queen Consort of England, there were obviously memories of Princess Diana on Coronation Day of the wife who prophetically knew she would never be queen.

Interview with Princess Diana about how she will never be Queen, 1995 – YouTube

Present Connections

Apart from these obvious memories for many people, the last few years have also revealed that Prince Charles is closely attached to the World Economic Forum who are responsible for Agenda 2030. He has openly stated that we need a Global Marshall Plan to save the environment.

VIDEO: Click the picture >>>

Prince Charles says we need a global Marshall Plan to save the environment | World Economic Forum \(weforum.org\)

For those that have studied this Agenda they know that their plans for a one world government have revealed that they want to create a world that does not honour the sovereignty of people, and their rights to freedom, in every aspect. They have implemented:

- The silencing of freedom to speech, was blatantly exercised against thousands of experts in the fields of science and medicine in relation to Covid 19, in order to dictate a narrative, they wanted to portray.
- They silence climatologists who do not fit the narrative of their agenda for the environment, and have installed mayors across major cities of the world to implement 15-minute zones which ultimately will not allow you to leave your area without their permission.
- They promote sexual immorality at every level of society starting with the very youngest in order to demoralize, confuse and control them.

- They promote illegal immigration, but not for the reason of equality or humaneness, but to dilute the natural patriotism and respect we should have for each individual country, and their faith.
- They control every system in society, and their plan is to create a world for the super-rich who will have everything, and a world for the rest of us who will possess nothing.
- There plans which have been known for many years were made obvious through their experimentation upon the world during 2020 onwards, to see how we would comply to many rules which did not make sense, most especially against a virus which had a 99% recovery rate.

Thankfully, many people are aware of this agenda across the world. They have connected the dots which all lead back to the same place. For this reason, I believe there has been little interest in the Coronation Day 2023 in relation to the Queen's Coronation in the UK.

Elsewhere in the UK

On May 6th across the country well away from the City of London there was very little indication that a monumental occasion was taking place. There were very few signs of patriotism and a need to be present to witness history.

It was a dark cold rainy day, and was exceptionally oppressive. It was not a joyous atmosphere. A few houses in each road had rain sodden flags hanging from their bedroom windows. In the areas where I drove there were a few teenagers roaming the streets aimlessly wandering what to do. Some shops and stores were open and inside were bored shop assistants inside wearing cardboard crowns on their heads. No one seemed happy.

Friends reported that in the cities which they visited, the shops were open and that they were mainly crowded. For some, it was an excuse to visit their local pub and have a drink together, but it was not to celebrate a King.

On my way home I called in at a local park which is also home to a stately manor and which was once the ancestral home of Viscount Ednam, a close friend of the Royal Family. Although it is now a popular tourist attraction and wedding venue it was once a famous weekend retreat for royalty and in 1934 The Duke and Duchess of Kent spent 2 weeks of their honeymoon there. They had erected a large screen in the grounds in order for visitors to watch the live event of The Coronation, but by all accounts, the event had not been well attended.

As I sat alone in the coffee lounge overlooking the grounds, a family with 2 children came in out of the cold and damp.

The family had obviously made some attempt to recreate some excitement for their children and they were dressed in red white and blue. They sat at the next table crayoning in some pictures of the king.

I felt sad for the efforts they had made and understood their need for some patriotism and a sense of history which would create some stability in their lives. People want to be united.

Unfortunately, I feel King Charles III will not provide that stability or unity. The Royal Family live by a different set of rules completely. They are exempt from paying taxes and exempt from the law, and this appears to now include many other people who are in positions of power.

Rules and Laws That the Royal Family Is Allowed to Break \(insider.com\)

The reality of those who have everything and those who are being left with nothing has never been more evident than it is now for people, not just in the UK, but for those across the world.

The Coronation was for spectators who have not yet realized that their governments and their elected leaders are not serving them at all. They have placed themselves above them and see people as resources to be 'controlled' and not respected as the sovereign beings which they are. Who have they signed an allegiance to?

Pledges and Vows

King Charles III is meant to pledge and make a vow to be the defender of the Christian faith, but 30 years ago said he would defend all faiths.

From a religious perspective it was reported that on his coronation and behind a screen, he was anointed on his head, hands and heart with holy oil consecrated in Jerusalem, as a symbol of his divine right to rule.

It is reported that the screen is new, and it had 3 sides to it to make it more private.

The main panel features a tree with the names of the Commonwealth's 56 member states embroidered on each leaf. The 2 side screens have embroidered crosses 2.6 metres high x 2.2 metres wide. It features a dove on each side of the screen and an angel blowing a trumpet.

Defender of all faiths? Coronation puts focus on King Charles's beliefs | King Charles coronation | The Guardian

Vows and pledges are of course very important because they are meant to be binding. Historically, we make our vows before God, sometimes in public and sometimes in private.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Justin Welby, defended his command to swear allegiance to the King, later stating it was 'hospitality' and an open invitation. The archbishop is well known for adapting biblical beliefs to conform to some very diverse beliefs which are promoted in society. His words are often twisted.

'It's not a command': Archbishop defends request for public to cry out in support of King | ITV News

My thoughts, along with the thoughts of many others are that vows and actions should be adhered to, and if you are following the rules of Agenda 2030, you will not be following the rules of God, which are always for the good of people.

Let My People Go

On 6th May 2023, I could not physically watch the Coronation. On a personal level I felt I would be betraying the one who Christians believe is above all humanity. One who cares for people. A king above all kings.

Would those vows be adhered to?

As I sat in the empty coffee lounge of a stately home, once used by royals, I thought about his crown, the one made of thorns, his humility, his persecution, and yet the powerful message he conveyed to all, which still exists today if we really listen.

As I looked out the window, I also noticed a small white dove was sitting on the window ledge. The waitress commented she thought he had been injured and the groundsman had given him some food that morning.

He was pure white and sat within feet of my visit and remained. He appeared to convey a simple message of Hope to me amidst a world that is being systematically taken over with lies.

I believe that the overwhelming feeling of oppression which was reported by many people on the 6th May was the opposite of what this simple message of Hope conveyed. In one space and in this one moment of time there was a collective gathering, many of whom have pledged an allegiance to a One World Order, a 2-tier system of the super elite against the people of this world.

Is King Charles III one of them?

© 2023 Shirley Edwards – All Rights Reserved

E-Mail Shirley Edwards: eshirley02@gmail.com