

The globalists and the left/right paradigm

The entrance of Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders into the political debate has shaken up the status quo of both political parties and the stranglehold they have over the elections and the media. Although it has always been true, more Americans today than ever before are beginning to see how the political establishment of both parties represent the interests of a powerful global elite and not the interests of the average voter.

Although Bernie Sanders and Donald Trump have completely different political and economic philosophies, both of these men are not the “bought and paid for” candidates that dominate both political parties. Both Trump and Sanders are not afraid to attack the globalist trade treaties that are destroying the middle class of America and enriching the globalist elite. It is these trade treaties which are the single most important issue in this election, and all of the other issues which may have importance are subordinate to this one because the trade treaty issue is about “following the money,” which controls all the other issues.

A new study from Tufts University exposes the glowing claims of the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), predicting that the TPP will cause the loss of another 450,000 jobs in the US by 2025. All the Republican and Democratic Party candidates with exception of Sanders and Trump seem perfectly fine with this massacre of the American middle class. The globalists want to destroy America as we know it and merge it into a one-world government.

It's not that Donald Trump is particularly more virtuous than the other candidates or that he is independently wealthy and may not have made deals with the globalists. But there is something very telling when all the globalist-owned major media corporations, the so-called conservative talk show hosts, and the entire Republican Party unite to take Trump down. These people should not be unified in their opposition to Trump, but they are and the question is "Why?" The conservative media has always been infiltrated by people who masquerade as conservative, but in reality have a hidden agenda.

Perhaps the most influential and famous "conservative" intellectual of his time, William F. Buckley Jr. worked for the CIA and, along with many intelligence community colleagues, he went on to found the pseudo-conservative National Review magazine. Buckley was a student at Yale University and a member of the secret society, Skull and Bones. Buckley was partially mentored by his Yale professor, Willmore Kendall, formerly of the OSS and a "former" Trotskyite who served as a shill and informant for J. Edgar Hoover's FBI and as a consultant and recruiter for the CIA. It is alleged that Kendall recruited Buckley into the CIA.

In the current election the National Review has become the "conservative attack dog" against Donald Trump. Television and radio talk show host Glenn Beck wrote a recent article in the January 21, 2016 National Review entitled "Conservatives Against Trump." Beck and conservative radio talk show hosts Mark Levin and Rush Limbaugh have used their considerable clout among conservatives and evangelicals to attack Trump and promote Ted Cruz as the truly Constitutional and conservative candidate. In contrast, radio talk show host Michael Savage calls Donald Trump, "the Winston Churchill of our time."

Joining in these attacks on Trump are the major media outlets including Fox News Network, and the Republican Party. There is something very suspicious about how so-called true conservatives can unite with powerful groups and organizations that they would not ordinarily unite behind.

Ted Cruz promotes himself as the only true Conservative and Constitutional candidate and has gone out of his way to “woo” Evangelical Christians, who have a long-term track record of being fooled easily and voting for Republican candidates who put on a superficial show of being devout Christians. All it took for George W. Bush to win the Evangelical vote was a prayer with Billy Graham. Sadly to say, many Evangelical Christians will not take the time to do their own homework on a candidate, but simply listen to some celebrity Christian leader who endorses a candidate. Despite all this, the majority of Evangelical Christians are behind Donald Trump.

There are a lot of disturbing questions about the globalist ties that Ted Cruz appears to have. First, his wife Heidi Cruz was very active in the North American Union/Security and Prosperity Partnership created by the Council on Foreign Relations. In the CFR report, “Building a North American Community,” Heidi Cruz is listed as a task force member. The North American Union is an admitted open borders plan to merge Canada, Mexico, and the United States into a North American Union modeled after the European Union, under a regional global government. I first wrote about this at length in my 2005 book, Are You Ready? Cruz says that his wife opposed the North American Union, but on pages 33 and 34 of the Task Force’s report, “Additional and Dissenting Views,” Heidi Cruz states:

“I support the Task Force report and its recommendations aimed at building a safer and more prosperous North America. Economic prosperity and a world safe from terrorism and other security threats are no doubt inextricably linked. While governments play an invaluable role in both regards, we must emphasize the imperative that economic investment be led and perpetuated by the private sector. There is no force proven like the market for aligning incentives, sourcing capital, and producing results like financial markets and profit-making businesses. This is simply necessary to sustain a higher living standard for the poorest among us—truly the measure of our success. As such, investment funds and financing mechanisms should be deemed attractive instruments by those committing the capital and should only be developed in conjunction with market participants.”

There is no way you can read Heidi Cruz’s words and come up with the idea she opposes the North American Union; in fact the exact opposite is true: she is passionately endorsing it.

However, the issue is not Heidi Cruz; the issue is Ted Cruz and the powerful globalists who are financing his campaign. Just a couple of days ago, Ted Cruz proudly uploaded a picture with him meeting with Henry Kissinger, one of the most powerful Rockefeller globalists in the world. But let’s look at the Four Super PACs, all sharing the title “Keep the Promise” who have raised $31 million for Cruz. The elite Mercer family of New York are reportedly backing one of the PACs. Robert Mercer, the Hedge fund magnate, was reportedly a major financial donor to the 2016 presidential campaign of Ted Cruz. In her excellent article entitled, “WHY THE GOP ESTABLISHMENT HATES DONALD TRUMP” By Kelleigh Nelson in the October 27, 2015 NewsWithViews.com, Nelson writes:

“The poll that placed Trump in second place in Iowa was a fake, paid for by the notorious Club For Growth Action (CFG) and differs from the NBC News/WSJ/Marist poll over the weekend that has Trump in first place in Iowa by five points.”

Nelson continues, “CFG’s partners and allies include the Peter G. Peterson Foundation. Peterson is chairman emeritus of the Council on Foreign Relations and former chairman of the New York Federal Reserve Bank. Another ally is the US Chamber of Commerce, who is behind the invasion of illegal aliens on our southern borders.”

According to Nelson, “Guess whom CFG is backing for president? You guessed it! Globalist, pro-amnesty, pro-common core, pro-free trade (off shoring more American jobs and American sovereignty) Jeb Bush." Common Core is an educational system that forces public school teachers to, "teach to the test." It is deliberately designed to "dumb down" students and to create frustration among parents so that they will enroll in their children in Charter Schools, promoted by people like Bill Gates. But, when you read the "fine print" about Charter Schools, it is a Trojan Horse designed to impact both private and religious schools where the parent is not allowed to have any real influence. Charter Schools are not a solution; they are a Trojan Horse created to solidify social engineering programs where parents are locked-out of any important decision-making.

The purpose of this article is not intended to be a "pro-Trump" piece; the article is the result of research into several of the candidates and what facts and conspicuous trends emerged. Again, the most revealing facts are the obvious globalist financing behind Ted Cruz. The other fact, which is very revealing, is the unification and organization of so-called conservative media outlets, conservative personalities, and major media along with the GOP who have united to destroy Trump. Since a number of these news organizations and political parties are controlled by globalists, then why do powerful conservatives unite with them in taking down Trump?

What should be apparent by now to any person with a minimum amount of perception is that in addition to the globalist controlled GOP establishment and the globalist controlled major media outlets, there exists a wide spectrum of "conservative media stars" who are not what they appear to be, anymore than William F. Buckley was what he appeared to be. That may be difficult for some people to accept because they have a deep emotional bond with these conservative media stars, but there is always a danger when you surrender your intellect, perception, and reason to powerful emotions.

When you do this, you have allowed yourself to become a pawn in someone else's game plan. That truth would apply to the strong emotional ties that people have with Donald Trump. You open the door to being exploited and used when you stop using your God-given intelligence, wisdom, and perception and allow yourself to be swept up by emotion. I deal extensively with the psychological dynamics of mass persuasion, propaganda, and social engineering in my book Mass Awakening.

Personally, I have not decided for whom I am going to vote because I have not gathered all the information and there will more information coming out as we get closer to the election. Some of that information will be accurate and some of that information will be disinformation designed to change people's minds and loyalties, especially right before voting days, when people don't have a chance to process the information. But each of us has a responsibility to think, reason, and research for ourselves from multiple sources about the candidates. If we are willing to do our homework, it should be pretty obvious when the day is done for whom we should vote.
