

The OKC Bombing Coverup Of The Middle East Terrorist Cell

The Oklahoma City terrorist attack on the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building happened on April 19, 1995 killing 168 people, allegedly by a massive homemade bomb concealed in a rental truck in front of the building. Terry Nichols was convicted in a federal court and faced state proceedings. He was sentenced to life imprisonment without parole when the jury deadlocked on the death sentence.

Investigation by NBC Reporter

Investigative reporter, Jayna Davis who worked for the NBC affiliate in Oklahoma City uncovered evidence that Nichols had ties with the terrorist, Osama Bin Laden before the bombing. Timothy McVeigh was also convicted in the case and was put to death on June 11, 2001 at the U.S. Federal Penitentiary in Terre Haute, Indiana. (Link to pdf of WSJ detailed article.)

Jayna Davis says there were other people involved beside Nichols and McVeigh, but when she took her information to the FBI, they wanted to make the bombing of the Murrah Building a domestic terrorist incident only.

When Jayna worked for the Oklahoma City NBC affiliate, she was tasked with finding out others who were involved in the bombing. She said an intelligence source in one of the highest levels in the federal government later confirmed it was a Middle Eastern terrorist cell living and operating in the heart of Oklahoma City just a few miles from the Murrah building.

During the course of her investigation, they found several witnesses that NBC deemed very credible. They testified and told Jayna that they identified an Iraqi national, a former member of Saddam Hussein's national guard through his own admission later. He said he was in the company of Timothy McVeigh the day of the bombing, and in the passenger seat of the Rider Truck, stepping out of the truck just moments before the blast and speeding away from downtown in a brown Chevrolet pickup that was identified by the FBI as a possible getaway vehicle in an all points bulletin the day of the bombing.

The government never said a word about this third man. They actually said they did not believe there was a foreign connection to the bombing. They had 24 sworn witness identifications that swear there were seven or eight Arab men from the beginning to the day the plot was executed.

Jayna had several police records, court records, and public court documents she had amassed, literally hundreds of documents. She spoke to law enforcement officials, intelligence officials, and terrorist experts...all who confirm the most crucial aspects of the witness testimonies.

McVeigh and Nichols were heavily involved, but according to Jayna's sources, it was masterminded by Osama Bin Laden. The Writ of Mandamus that was filed just prior to McVeigh's trial by his defense team that a witness in the Philippines, a member of Abu Sayyaf, a terrorist group identified as being funded by Bin Laden, identified Terry Nichols in the presence of Ramzi Yousef, the convicted mastermind of the World Trade Center bombing in 1993, and several of Yousef's co-conspirators in that bombing. They were discussing bombing activities prior to the OKC bombing. Jayna says that is on the court record.

In September of 1997, Jayna went to the OKC FBI office with an affidavit regarding all the information she wished to turn over to them, along with a notary. The FBI said they had no problem taking it, but that he had to call the legal department. Twenty minutes later he came back and said they had to call the U.S. Attorney's office in Denver that was handling the bombing case in the trial of Terry Nichols. Jayna's sworn witness statements implicating others unknown were refused. And that information implicated a middle eastern terrorist cell funded by Osama Bin Laden as assisting Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols in executing the bombing of the Murrah Building. Link

Jayna Davis spent 10 years investigating this bombing. The result is her 2008 book, The Third Terrorist.

The Surveillance State

The shock of the bombing left us wondering why anyone would do such a thing. But there were forces behind the scenes whose agenda called for bringing about the surveillance state. Reportedly, a document to allow surveillance of American citizens was already written, namely the Patriot Act. But the Patriot Act had not yet been presented before Congress. In order to enhance the possibility of its passage the forces involved most likely felt an impetus was needed, something that would cause people to acquiesce, and go along with authorizing spying on Americans in order to “keep them safe.”

The head of the FBI at the time was Louis Freeh and he testified before a Senate Committee and basically said, “We are going to have to watch these people, they might blow-up a federal building.” The people he was referring to were those who would be most unlikely to do such a thing, but needed to be targeted. Those people are the ones whose daily lives involve beliefs and submission to Biblical principles, the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence and God given freedoms.

We will probably never fully know what happened that 19th day in April, 1995, when the Murrah Building was destroyed, but there’s one thing for sure – we know that what was officially reported was not all that really happened, and the surveillance tapes don’t tell it all.

The Ryder Truck Bomb

We know that the Ryder truck fertilizer bomb didn’t actually blow up the building and kill all those people. There had to be planted bombs in the building itself. The building was blown-out not in, and a two and a half or three-foot wall, which was only a few feet away from the Ryder truck, reportedly, wasn’t even disturbed. The bombing lent great impetus to the planned false perception by the public that we had reached a crisis point with domestic terrorism.

McVeigh and Nichols were guilty, but they had a lot of help, and the establishment doesn’t want the American people to know who that help was.

President Clinton aided in preventing the truth about a warning from informant for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF), Carol Howe, that the Murrah Building could be a target for the next two weeks. It was reported that the reason the warning was ignored was because it named the Murray building, and since no building by that name could be found... it was disregarded and ignored.

The TV News Magazine, Dateline had scheduled a special to bring all this to light, but they were called in to the White House and were admonished not to go ahead with the special. We don't know what kind of pressure was applied by President Clinton; all we know is that the special was dropped. FBI Director Louie Freeh may have been involved, but I believe Attorney General Janet Reno was far more persuasive.

It was reported that a retired Marine colonel, who had completed the investigative work for Dateline, held a press conference bringing to light the cover-up of the truth. He was later fired for revealing the story. The New American Magazine exposed what he told William Jasper, that if he and the New American didn't continue to bring the facts to light – the American people would never know what happened in Oklahoma City.

Not heeding the warning by Carol Howe was very lame, and it looks as though the ATF, FBI and Janet Reno's DOJ were looking for an excuse to ignore the warning, and that excuse was supplied by the misspelled name of the building.

The ATF

The ATF had bomb squads on the scene the morning of the 19th. It was reported that members of the ATF who were working in the Murrah Building were notified not to come to work on the 19th. This raises the question about the ATF. Did they have prior knowledge of what was going to happen? Or is this conspiracy theory garbage?

Why did the ATF have bomb squads on the scene prior to the bombing event? What was their purpose? They certainly weren't there to prevent the bombing. Could it possibly be that they were there to cover-up the facts connected with it?

From various documented reports on the internet, the damage was done by pre-set explosives beneath the part of the building where the daycare was located.

OKC Police Sergeant Yeakey

This was where Sergeant Yeakey of the Oklahoma City Police Department saw something which caused him to become suspicious of what had happened, but we probably will never know what Sergeant Yeakey discovered while he was rescuing people from the rubble at the site, for he was murdered before he had an opportunity to divulge it, although it was called a suicide.

What we do know is that Sergeant Yeakey filed a very lengthy report of eleven pages which the OKC Police Department refused for unknown reasons. They continued to pressure him to change his report to about one page which he refused to do, and considering his death we have to wonder why.

Based upon parts of a letter he sent to a friend, he wasn't about to waffle on his report. If he did, he wouldn't be the man he apparently was – a man of integrity, honesty and truth. He was going to stick to his report, come hell or high-water and it cost him his life.

Here is part of his letter:

Knowing what I know now and understanding fully what went down that morning makes me ashamed to wear a badge from Oklahoma City's Police Department. I took an oath to uphold the law and to enforce the law to the best of my ability. This is something I cannot honestly do and hold my head up proud any longer if I keep my silence as I am ordered to do...

The sad truth of the matter is that they have so many police officers convinced that by covering up the truth about the operation gone wrong, that they are actually doing our citizens a favor. What I want to know is how many other operations have they had that blew up in their faces? Makes you stop and take another look at Waco...

Even if I tried to explain it to you the way it was explained to me and the ridiculous reason for having our own police department falsify reports to their fellow officers, to the citizens of the city and to our country, you would feel the way I do about all this...

The last communication from Sergeant Yeakey was to a friend whom he told that he was on a mission to secure some evidence that he had compiled about the Federal cover-up of the OKC bombing. He said that he was being followed by the Feds and would have to get them off his trail, but then he would return and they (he and his friend) would go to lunch – but he never returned.

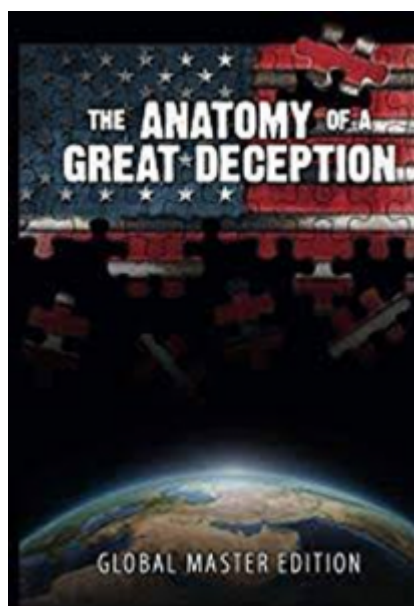

According to the report of his supposed suicide, he slashed his wrists and forearms eleven times and his throat twice near the jugular vein. Then, apparently seeking a more private place to die, he crawled another mile of rough terrain away from his car and climbed a fence before shooting himself in the head with a small caliber revolver. What appeared to be rope burns on his neck, hand-cuff bruises on his wrists and muddy grass embedded in his slash wounds strongly indicated that he had some help in traversing this final distance.

Several years ago, I listened to an interview of Tonia Yeakey, his wife, with a news reporter and a former police officer, in which she revealed that someone that knew told her that her husband had been dragged the distance referred to in the above paragraph.

As much as has come to light concerning the OKC bombing, there are still very few people that have any idea what really happened.

Most people continue to think that only Timothy McVeigh was guilty of murdering all those people even though the evidence clearly shows different. People believe Sergeant Yeakey committed suicide because he felt guilty for not being able to rescue more people after the bombing of the Murrah Building. The reason they think this way is because of the lies that were told – all the way to the White House, to cover up the truth.

The OKC bombing is only one example of how the FBI and other federal agencies have consistently been used to cover-up corruption and murder, along with all the connections over the past thirty years.

Corruption in the FBI

Louisiana State Senator John Milkovich recently published a book, "Robert Mueller, Errand Boy for the New World Order" which chronicles the actions of the FBI under Mueller's leadership from Ruby Ridge, Pan Am 103, 9-11 and much more, which reveals a pattern by the FBI to systematically facilitate and cover-up actions of the guilty and punish the innocent.

Following is a small segment from the book which reveals much about how Mueller operates in carrying out an investigation.

In short, with respect to 9-11, Mueller has not conducted an investigation; so much as he has obstructed an investigation. His efforts betray more of an effort to conceal the culpability of the perpetrators than to reveal their culpability. With respect to the attack of 9-11, he has not labored to uncover the truth. He has striven to cover it up. It is difficult to rationally look at his actions and avoid the conclusion that his real motive for constructing a Surveillance State is not to investigate and expose terrorists – but to spy on Americans.

The book is a must read, and can be purchased at the above link or from Amazon. This is the first in a series.
