

Trump, the candidate who listens to Americans

"Trump fills the vacuum left by a political faction that has for years promised its voters it would do things it had no intention of doing." –The Federalist

"Trump has the fire in his belly to make America great again, and probably do it the right way." –Mike Ditka, in a Chicago Sun-Times interview

✘ Oregon cowboy, LaVoy Finicum died at the hands of local police. He was shot in the back three times according to autopsy reports. [\[Link\]](#) Ranchers all over the west are losing their land, and it's the Bureau of Land Management who is the culprit. [\[Link\]](#)

When Trump was first questioned about the land in the Western states being held by the Feds, he thought it was okay. Then he got some flak from the American citizens who know what's going on. So he sent his son to investigate, and this is the outcome of that investigation.

Trumps do their homework!!!!!! And Donald Trump listens to the people. I know that for a fact myself, because he's talked about two of my articles in public and on twitter. I don't know of one politician in power today who listens to anything we have to say. Watch this video where Trump takes on the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), and calls them a dictatorial agency.

The latest article in the Reno Gazette Journal is Trump: Nevada, US Needs a President Who Obeys the Law. Here is part of what Donald Trump states in this article:

The United States of America is a land of laws, and Americans value the rule of law above all. Why, then, has our Congress allowed the president and the executive branch to take on near-dictatorial power? How is it that we have a president who will not enforce some laws and who encourages faceless, nameless bureaucrats to manage public lands as if the millions of acres were owned by agencies such as the Bureau of Land Management and the Department of Energy? In Nevada, the lack of enforcement of immigration laws and the draconian rule of the BLM are damaging the economy, lowering the standard of living and inhibiting natural economic growth. The only way to change these circumstances is to bring to Washington a president who will rein in the federal government and get Congress to do its job. It's not that we don't have talented people in D.C. It's that we have no leadership there.

The BLM controls over 85 percent of the land in Nevada. In the rural areas, those who for decades have had access to public lands for ranching, mining, logging and energy development are forced to deal with arbitrary and capricious rules that are influenced by special interests that profit from the D.C. rule-making and who fill the campaign coffers of Washington politicians. Far removed from the beautiful wide open spaces of Nevada, bureaucrats bend to the influence that is closest to them. Honest, hardworking citizens who seek freedom and economic independence must beg for deference from a federal government that is more intent on power and control than it is in serving the citizens of the nation. In and around Clark County, the situation is even worse.

Read the rest of the article, it's quite informative as to what Trump sees and understands.

Trump Listens to The People

Look, Trump isn't a politician, he's a businessman, and he knows how to run a business and get along with people, but he doesn't know about everything we know. Those of us who have been watching the destruction of our country for over 50 years know many facets of the globalist agenda. Trump knows there's something very, very wrong, and he knows he can fix it. Reading his book, Crippled America, will tell you he understands the problems we're facing. Yet, just like the BLM grab of western land, which we all know is UN Agenda 21, Trump is getting educated on more and more of the problems that face American citizens, problems that he really had no information about previously.

The mere fact that this man reads and listens is a huge plus in the argument for him. How many of your local state reps or your federal representatives send you back these meaningless letters that say they'll keep your thoughts in mind when they vote. Like hell they will, they don't give a rat's behind what the American Citizen thinks or wants. We all know it too, and that's where the anger has come from, and that's why Trump resonates with the hearts of the people who love America.

One of my cyber buds who I think a great deal of, because she's so very knowledgeable on the horrors of Islam, actually called Donald Trump an idiot and said to me that only the uneducated and ignorant are voting for him. Well, excuse me all to hell and back, but if Mr. Trump is an idiot, we need a lot more like him to come to the fore. How many idiots do you know who could take $1 million and turn it into $10 billion? Granted, he later inherited $200 million from his father, but he still made a lot more on his own.

Let's take a look at just a few of the things Donald Trump stands for, and what he's actually said. All the subjects below are Mr. Trump's own words. There were many more, but these were the top ones.

Illegal Immigration – We don't have a country if we don't have borders. We will build a wall. It will be a great wall, it will do what it's supposed to do, keep illegal immigrants out.

Now, with that said, we're going to have a beautiful big door right in the middle of that wall and people are going to come into our country, and they're going to come in legally. We either have a country or we don't.

Our Country is Totally Divided – There's so much hatred, there's so many problems, our president was a terrible unifier. He was the opposite of a unifier. He was a divider. I will unify and bring our country back together. It's something I've done all my life; I get along with people. A lot of people don't know that about me, and they don't think that's the case, but it is the case. I've built a great company by bringing people together and I'll bring America together.

Education – I'm a tremendous believer in education, but education has to be at a local level. We cannot have the bureaucrats in Washington telling you how to manage your child's education. So, Common Core is a total disaster, we can't let it continue. We are rated 28th in the World. The United States, think of it, 28th in the World! Frankly we spend far more per pupil than any other country in the world, by far, it's not even a close second. So here we are, we spend more money and we're rated 28th. Third world countries are ahead of us. We're going to end common core and have education an absolute priority.

(Mr. Trump has stated he likes charter schools, and I would suggest he doesn't understand that charter schools are tax funded, but have absolutely no oversight. They do not report to the local school boards. We have Islamic charter schools, new age Waldorf charter schools, Chinese charter schools, and any other number of charter schools that we know nothing about. We are taxed, but we have no oversight. Charter schools are taxation without representation! No, Mr. Trump, I am not for Charter schools, and neither should you be.)

The Military – I'm going to make our military so big, so powerful, so strong, that nobody, absolutely nobody is going to mess with us. We're going to take care of our vets and we're going to get rid of ISIS, and get rid of them fast.

Jobs – One of the things I'm proudest about is that I create jobs, over the year's tens of thousands of jobs for our country, and I'll do that for you. I will tell you this and I will say it with certainty, I will be the greatest jobs producing president that God ever created. I love the subject, I love doing it, and I love helping people. There's nothing like helping people than getting them and their family great jobs.

The Economy – One of the things I'm going to do, and largely with our great tax plan, where everybody's taxes are going down. We're going to grow our economy; we have to get rid of the $19 Trillion-dollar debt. So unfair, so totally unfair, to our young people. We are not going to leave you with that burden.

Political Correctness – I have a great education, I went to an Ivy league college, but I'm not politically correct. Because to be politically correct just takes too much time, it takes too much effort. We have to get things done in this country, and you're never going to get it done if we just stay politically correct.

Self-Funding – I know the best people and I'm totally self-funding my campaign. So I don't have to take donors and special interest people and lobbyists. I don't have to bring them in. I know the absolute best people, and I'm bringing them with me to Washington. We will have the greatest negotiators in the world, negotiating against China and Japan and Mexico and Viet Nam and all of the many countries who are ripping us off. We're going to bring our jobs back; we're going to bring manufacturing back. We're not going to be the patsies we've been for the world for too long. It's going to end. I've got the best people in the world, and we're going to use them.

Life Changing Experience – It takes a lot of courage to run for president, especially if you're a non-politician, which I'm proud to say I am. But the journey has been an unbelievably interesting one and fascinating. I've met so many great people, so many people who want to be a part of government and they want to do such wonderful things for our country. America has been great to me; I want to be great to America. I want to do something that's going to put us back on the right course, and make America great again.

Law Enforcement Respect – The police in our country are not appreciated. We do not give them the kind of respect that they have to have. Sure, there'll be a bad apple, there'll be a bad thing happen, and it ends up on the news for two weeks and everybody hates the police. The fact is, they do an incredible job. We have to give them more authority and more respect. Without the great police forces we have throughout the United States, we wouldn't be sitting here, and we wouldn't have the lives that we have. They do a fantastic job, we have to appreciate and respect our police.

First Day in Office – So many people are asking me, what would I do on my first day in office. Well, you have executive orders all over the place. So many would be terminated. The good thing about an executive order signed by our president is that it can be unsigned immediately. You don't have to go through Congress. So I would get rid of the attack on our second amendment, because that's what Obama is doing when he does that. I would very, very strongly get rid of the attack on the border. We have a border that's like a piece of Swiss cheese, people are pouring through. That order will be the single first thing I do, and we will work on all of these executive orders, and the bad ones of which mostly that's what you have, will be terminated immediately my first day in office.

Conclusion

If you want Trump's plans and programs, you can go to his website and click on "positions." You can also buy his book, Crippled America for more in-depth discussions of his plans.

Ted Cruz has said "Donald Trump's voters have relatively low information and are not that engaged." I beg to differ with Mr. Cruz. Mr. Trump's voters want to return America to her past greatness. We want to make America great again, and we know it can be done with Donald Trump!
