

We The People Must Prevent The Mission To Murder Uncle Sam

Ron Edwards

On the surface one may wonder, how in the world can a nation as powerful as ours be killed off, or murdered. After all, it is still often stated that the United States of America is the wealthiest and most powerful nation on earth. Just recently Vice President Mike Pence stated on Fox Business Network Making Money, hosted by Charles Payne, that “our economy is the strongest in the history of mankind.” Among the most important aspects of American power and wealth is the recognition of and Providential guidance of our Creator. In addition, America the beautiful is a sort of ideology comprised of the shared beliefs in the principles set forth in noted documents as the Bill of Rights and the United States Constitution. It was British author G.K. Chesterton who wrote: “America is the only nation in the world that is founded on a creed, one set forth with theological lucidity in the Declaration of Independence.”

This concept, known as Creedalism, has been advanced by sociologists, historians, and political theorists, such as Gunnar Myrdal, Allan Bloom and Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. Former Education Czar and cohost on the Wise Guys Bill Bennet via Foxnation.com once said, The American national identity is based on a creed, on a set of principles and ideas.” The United States is a nation of numerous races, many religious faiths, many points of origin, but it has worked out very well due to our shared faith in the belief in Liberty. This has proven to be stronger, more enduring and better than any nation of controlled cogs in the wheel forced to exalt the elite few at the expense of the many. Both Iran and Hong Kong are examples of what happens when people are forced to exist according to the whims of the uncaring unalienable rights destroying authoritarian bullies.

Some United States presidents, including Donald J. Trump have endorsed this view of our republic. In his first inaugural address, George W. Bush proclaimed: "America has never been united by blood or birth or soil. We are bound by ideals that move us beyond our backgrounds, lift us above our interests, and teach us what it means to be citizens." There were fifty-six signers of the Declaration of Independence representing the thirteen original colonies who severed their political connections to Great Britain declaring that they were no longer under British rule. Adopted by the continental Congress on July 4, 1776, these states would found a new nation, the United States of America. It was also envisioned for the United States to be a republic model for assimilation composed of mixed races who spoke a universal language. In addition to also proclaim a new concept of international brotherhood, without maddening entanglements. For example, both the NAFTA and GATT trade agreements that decimated our national manufacturing prowess.

In the Holy Bible King Solomon is quoted "there is nothing new under the sun." Boy was his observation spot on. Throughout the annals of history, there has been an ongoing war between leaders on nations and kingdoms who desired a form of freedom and well being for their people and those who sought to control them from cradle to grave. As a boy growing up in Cleveland, I could not comprehend that in this land of plenty that what we know today to be deep state forces would ever want to destroy or drastically change such a great place. Yes, I was certainly taught about what a great republic I was blessed to be born in and how through voluntary goodness and she remained strong, without the need for nanny goat government controlling our lives.

There is an old Biblical verse that stipulates, "My people perish for lack of knowledge." The enemies of Liberty and our constitutionally limited form of government knew that to fundamentally transform America, they had to first figure out a way to insure that ensuing generations would no longer know about, or appreciate our unalienable rights. Thus, the federal takeover of the government school system was embarked upon, thus making it easier to intellectually and spiritually degrade the thinking processes and moral judgement of succeeding generations. The death of Uncle Sam was plotted by Colonial era loyalists, then civil war democrats who sought to maintain the unconstitutional brutality of slavery. The mission to destroy America from within continued through the years via both mostly democrats and some country club republicans.

During the 1950s, one of the Rockefellers thanked the major media of the time, including TIME Magazine for covering up the dastardly deeds of politicians and the international banking system, etc. Since those good old days, the globalists, the United Nations and leftist America politicians have literally been feverishly working to bring about our demise as a constitutionally limited republic land of liberty. To stop their plans "We the People" must seek Providential guidance and wisdom. Then we must become both fearless and energetic in the effort to stand for this nation under God. If not, we will devolve into one nation under. God bless you, God bless America and may America bless God.
