

Why Trump Hates Amerika

A few days ago, an ignorant or ill-intentioned political analyst published an article in which he compares President Trump to Russia's previous leader, Mikhail Gorbachev.[1] According to this analyst, "Like a reverse image of Gorbachev, Trump is a political leader who has lost faith in the efficacy of his country's governing philosophy," and added: "Trump doesn't think our defense of democratic values really works for America anymore."

What this analyst apparently ignores is that it was the Soviet Union, not Russia, the country in which Gorbachev lost faith. To understand this, we need to know what the Soviet Union really was.

The "spontaneous" Russian "revolution," which changed Russia into the aberration known as the Soviet Union, was actually a covert operation planned and carried out by international bankers and oil magnates. It would have been impossible for the revolutionaries to succeed without the money supplied by some of the most notable millionaires at that time.

Though initially he favored his father's autocratic ideas, eventually Tsar Nicholas II had initiated the implementation of a series of reforms directed to change Russia from a medieval into a modern society, which included the emancipation of the serfs, the creation of a Duma—a national assembly—and rural communes. These reforms would have encouraged the Russian people to think about the possibility of a benign government in which the people would democratically participate.

But some influential Wall Street bankers and oil magnates were not happy with these changes in Russia, and conceived another plan. In order to proceed with their plan, John D. Rockefeller, together with fellow conspirators, such as bankers Mellon and Morgan and steel magnate Andrew Carnegie, plus several of America's robber barons, combined their resources for up to $50 million (an enormous sum at the time), and created the American International Corporation (AIC), a powerful cartel allegedly devoted to stimulate world trade. The truth, however, is that the AIC was created to fund the overthrow of Tsar Nicholas II by a small group of professional revolutionaries: the Bolsheviks.

The main problem the conspirators had with Russia, however, was not its efforts to become an industrialized and modern nation, but that a large amount of oil had been discovered in Baku, nears the Caspian Sea in Azerbaijan. At the time, the Baku oil field was considered the largest known oil deposit in the world. By the early 1880s, Russian crude production had reached almost a third of U.S. production.

As expected, Rockefeller and his criminal associates of the AIC, Andrew Mellon, J.P. Morgan and Andrew Carnegie, were deeply alarmed about the Russians challenging their ambitions of controlling the world oil supply, and they began conspiring to develop a plan to stop the Russians in their tracks. They concluded that the only way to achieve their goal was to depose Czar Nicholas II, and the only way to accomplish that was through a "revolution."

To this effect, between 1907 and 1910 the conspirators met several times with Russian revolutionary Leon Trotsky, already living in exile in New York, and with Vladimir I. Lenin, another Russian revolutionary living in exile in Zurich. Eventually the arch-capitalists struck a deal with the arch-anti-capitalists: in exchange for financing their "revolution," the capitalists would be allowed to have a hidden hand in designing the disastrous economic system of what was soon to become the Soviet Union –allegedly the staunchest anti-capitalist nation in the world.

With the help of the conspirators, Lenin returned to Russia with plenty of gold in his famous "sealed" train, and, soon after Trotsky, under the protection of President Wilson and Colonel House, followed Lenin's path with more gold. This gold made possible the Russian "revolution" that plunged Russia for more than sixty years into the dark night of totalitarianism.

But some people knew of Lenin's activities and his true masters. In a speech to the House of Commons on November 5, 1919, Winston Churchill exposed in a few words the whole conspiracy:

". . . Lenin was sent into Russia . . . in the same way that you might send a vial containing a culture of typhoid or of cholera to be poured into the water supply of a great city, and it worked with amazing accuracy. No sooner did Lenin arrive than he began beckoning a finger here and a finger there to obscure persons in sheltered retreats in New York, Glasgow, in Bern and other countries, and he gathered together the leading spirits of a formidable sect, the most formidable sect in the world . . . With these spirits around him he set to work with demoniacal ability to tear to pieces every institution on which the Russian State depended."

What Churchill failed to mention, though, was that the ones who had disseminated the Communist plague were bankers from England, Europe and the U.S., among them the Rothschilds, Sir George Buchanan and Lord Alfred Milner (members of the Round Table, who had been instrumental in the creation of the CFR), the Warburgs, the Rockefellers and J.P. Morgan. With their investment, the conspirators had created a pseudo-enemy they controlled –to some extent. Soon after, the Soviet Union became the bogeyman the conspirators used for many years as a credible threat to manipulate and control the U.S. and other Western countries. The rest is history.

In the same fashion, it is not that President Trump, together with a large majority of Americans, has lost faith in their country. Actually, they have lost faith in communo-fascist

Amerika, the aberration the same people who destroyed Russia have been slowly but surely imposing upon the American people.

The main reason why the globalist conspirators didn't like America was because America, a land of free people, had become the main obstacle in their plans to create a communo-fascist New World Order with just two classes: the super rich and the hyper poor – a sort of modern medieval society. The reason why today they hate Trump so much is because he has become the greatest obstacle in carrying out their evil plans.

But Trump is not anti-American for the same reason that Gorbachev was not anti-Russian. Actually, both of them hated the aberrations imposed upon their countries by the globalist conspirators, and opposed it. President Trump, like many Americans, has lost faith in what current Amerika stands for, because current Amerika is a political, social, economic and moral aberration, and the country badly needs to be brought back to its true origins.

Today's communo-fascist Amerika has not much to do with the American Republic conceived by our Founding Fathers. Trump doesn't think our defense of democratic values really works for America anymore because, like many Americans, he has realized that the so-called "defense of democratic values" –the word "democracy" is not mentioned in any of the three documents on which this Republic was founded: the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights– has actually been a smoke-screen to hide military interventions in foreign countries to steal their natural resources for the sole benefit of the very same people who created the Soviet Union to prevent the Russian people from exploiting their country's natural resources.

They didn't work in the shadows to overthrow Mossadegh in Iran, Arbenz in Guatemala, Sukarno in Indonesia, Diem in Vietnam, Allende in Chile or ordered the assassination of President Kennedy, to defend democratic values, but to defend the narrow interests of a few transnational corporations.[2] They didn't push the U.S. into a long war in Vietnam or invade Iraq to protect democratic values.[3] They didn't create the European Union to protect democratic values. Fortunately, the people are awakening, and the conspirators' house of cards is crumbling.

Like many Americans, President Trump has realized that the so-called "free trade" is nothing but a gimmick to turn America into a Third World country. He is fully aware that the open borders policy is a trick to destroy the country's integrity and sovereignty. He knows that multiculturalism is a hoax to destroy our values and moral principles. As a true American patriot, he opposes those changes, and the communo-fascist globalist conspirators hate him for this.

Currently, the communo-fascist conspirators are openly talking about their plans to overthrow President Trump by any means necessary. In the alternate reality they have created inside their twisted minds they apparently ignore that overthrowing or assassinating President Trump will surely open a Pandora's box nobody wants to experience.

My only hope is that cooler heads prevail and the globalist conspirators of both the Left and the Right think twice before provoking the onset of drastic, irreversible events.
